Spring Suits Late Models

NOT a great many, but smartness characterizes them. The diversity of styles is sufficient to allow the widest latitude

The cutaway type continues to be the favorite, but we have others as well that are being taken up by the woman who likes smart clothes.

Cream Bedford cords and serges are new; plainly tailored, or relieved by touches of black. A particularly handsome serge model has black collar, while the large, full revers are of white satin in ermine effect.

Other Bedford cord models in navy, grey and fawn.

New and effective are the pin striped worsteds in slightly shot effect; light weight; satin_lined; colors, navy with green, sand with tan, black with old gold. Coat has prettily rounded panel in back; skirt slightly slashed in front, opening with buttons and buttonholes a little below the knee.

A black silk Ottoman cord has draped skirt in pannier effect; collar and cuffs of coat relieved by white trimmings.

Women's and misses' Norfolk suits in tweed, $17 to $20.

Irregular gored sections are a feature of some dressy models, pleat clusters in others; yet for the woman who prefers the mannish style we have an attractive selection of strictly tailored types.

On reaching Chilecte's house he passed at once to the study and dismissed. Greening for the night. But scarcely Loder rose and took the letter, a quick thrill of speculation and interest springing across his mind. During his time of banishment, he had followed the political situation with feverish attention, insupportably chafed by the desire to share in it, apprehensively, chilled at the thought of Chilcote's possible behavior. CHAPTER XXII—(Continued.)

There is no force so demornizing as unexpected light. Loder took a step backward, his hand hanging unguarded by his side, and Lillian stopping forward, caught it again before he could protest. Lifting it quickly, she looked scrutinistagy at the two rings. All women sump to conclusions, and it is extraordinary how seldom they jump abort. Seeing only what Lifting new, knowing only what the there, no than sould have staked a definite opinion, that the other sax takes a diffusery view, he are stopped paints at the rings her thoughts and her conclusions sped through her mind like arrows—all almed and all tending toward one point. She remismbered the day when she and Chilcote had talked of doubles, her skeptteism and his rehament detense stepticism and his rehement detense of the idea, his sudden interest in the book "Other Man's Shoes," and his anathems against life and its irrisome round of duties. She remembered her eyes that had locked at her in the door-way of her sister's house, and, last of all, she remembered Chiicote's unac-countable avoidance of the same subject of likenesses when she had men-tioned it yesterday driving through the park, and with it his unnecessarily enit repudiation of his former opin-tions. She reviewed each item, then she raised her head slowly and looked He was prepared for the glance and met it steadily. In the long moment that her eyes searched his face it was she and not he who changed color. She was the first to speak. "You were the man whose hands I saw in the tent," she said. She made the state-ment in her usual soft tones, but a slight tremor of excitement underran her voice. Poodles, Persian kittens, even crystal gazing balls, seemed very far away in face of this tangible, fabu-lous, present interest. "You are not Jack Chilcote," she said very slowly. "You are wearing his clothes and speaking in his voice, but you are not Jack Chilcote." Her tone quickened with a teuch of excitement. "You

Loder laughed suddenly—a full, conadder, reasured laugh. All the web fast the past half hour had spun about him, all the intolerable sense of an im-pending crash, lifted suddenly. He saw his way clearly, and it was Lillian who had opened his eyes.

Still looking at her, he smiled—a smile of reliant determination, such as Chilcots had never worn in his life.
And with a calm gesture he released "The greatest charm of woman is her magination," he said quietly. "Without it there would be no color in life;

with the same uninteresting tone of drab reality." He paused and smiled At his smile Lillian involuntarily cheeks. "Why do you say that?" she asked.

He lifted his head. With each mo-seaing."

The words and the tone both stung her. "Do you realize the position?" she asked sharply. "Do you realize that, whatever your plans are, I can spoil Loder still met her eyes. "I realize nothing of the sort," he said.

"Then you admit that you are not Jack Chilcote?" "I neither deny nor admit. My iden-tity is obvious. I can get twenty men to swear to it at any moment that you like. The fact that I haven't worn

Very slowly and attentively Loder read the letter, and, with the extreme quiet that with him invasiably covered emotion, he moved to the deak, wrote a note and handed it to the waiting servant. As the man turned toward the door he salled him.

"Benvice," he said smarply, "sthen, you've given that letter to Mr. Praide's servant ask Mrs. Chileote if she can spare me five minutes."

When Renwick had gone and closed the door behind him Loder paced the room with feverish activity. In one moment the aspect of life had been changed. BILLS—SECOND READING.

Hon. Mr. Mack, chairman of the Committee on Law Amendments, reported up favorably:

A Bill entitled, an Act respecting Rural Telephone Companies;

A Bill entitled, an Act to amend Chapter 44, Acts of 1907, entitled, an Act in relation to the Registration and Identification of motor vehicles, and Identification of motor vehicles, and the use of Public Highways by such vehicles, as amended by Chapter 29, Acts of 1911.

Hon. Mr. Armstrong, Chairman of the Select Committee on Bills, reported up favorably:

A Bill entitled, an Act to amend Chapter 74, Acts of 1882, entitled, an Act to incorporate the Grand Council of the Provincial Workingmen's Association;

A Bill entitled, an Act respecting the Charter of the City of Halfax.

Hon. Mr. Armstrong — The last named bill respecting the charter of the City of Halfax enacts nothing new. When the legislation was passed a year ago creating the Board of Control, it became necessary to adjust the charter to the changes in the city government, anticipating the time when the Board of Control Act would come into effect. Commissioners were appointed by the Bill entitled, an Act anticipating the time when the Board of Control Art would come into effect. Commissioners were appointed by the Governor-in-Council to revise and consolidate the city charter accordingly. This occurred last year. The Commissioners have prepared their revision and consolidation, and reported the same to the Governor-in-Council, and this was brought into force by proclamation on April 1, 1913. This revision and consolidation has been printed, but has not yet been reduced in the form of a book. Besides, it is necessary to incorporate in this revision and consolidation certain statutes relating to the City passed during the present session, and for giving the force of law to the body of such enactments when so further consolidated. This Bill which is now before the House, empowers the Governor-in-Council to select the Acts passed during the present session and to incorporate them with the enactments contained in the report of the Commissioners. The present Bill might accordingly be said to be whelly formal in its character.
