

and Maitland, and was ordained in Charlottetown, P. E. I. From this province he was sent to the West Indies. On one of his stations in the Island of Dominica he was prostrated with sickness, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. He next spent four years in Hamilton, Bermuda, and from thence was sent to Newfoundland. He preached with acceptance and success on the Port De Grave, Bonavista, St. John's, and Brigas Circuits. In Bonavista he witnessed a great revival, the fruit of which remains to this day, as numbers are there who were converted through his ministry, and to whom his name is fragrant with blessed memories. He was next sent to Nova Scotia in the year 1861, and stationed at Truro, then Mill Village, then Barrington.

Six years ago he was compelled to retire from the more active work of the ministry, to do what he could as far as his strength would permit. He preached occasionally, assisted in the prayer-meetings, and took part in the various services in the town. During the winter he grew feeble, and only once came to the house of God to attend the service of song. He was impressed with Bunyan's words: "After that they shut up the gates, which when I had seen I wished myself among them," he said, "I wish myself among them." His last public act was at the funeral of a friend, when with tremulous voice he prayed for the bereaved family, and touchingly breathed forth the hope of reunion in heaven. For a few days only he stood on the brink of the river of death. He responded fervently in prayer, as a few hours before he died he was commended to God. He was trusting on the atonement. His last words were, "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory." And then he calmly slept in Jesus, in the sixty-second year of his age, and the fortieth of his ministry.

He was a good man. He manifested a deep interest
