All right class, let me direct your attention to these positive and negative nucleons (mass numbers indeterminate) in a bubble chamber. The outflaring sides — Fenwick, are you listening? . . . oh, yes, professor, sir, but begging your pardon, aren't those air vents? . . . Blast, Fenwick, you lump, how dare you to argue with an educated man? . . . Sir, I use the Scientific Method . . . Well, in that case, your argument, Fenwick, is incontrovertible. Those are air vents after all. (Round of cressnik applause follows)
