

JAPANESE AMBUSCADED.

And Nearly Two Battalions Were Wiped Out.

JAPANESE REVERSE.

A Hai-Cheng, Manchuria, despatch says: A flanking movement of the Japanese around the Russian left from Feng-Wang-Cheng, June 9, was repulsed with a loss of two whole battalions. (A battalion consists of 800 men.)

A large Japanese force moved out in the morning along the Feng-wang-Cheng and Hai-Cheng Road. The Russians had a force strongly posted in a ravine 30 miles south-east of Hai-Cheng. The Japanese were preceded by two battalions, who walked into the Russian ambush. They received a murderous rifle and artillery fire at close range, and were wiped out, only one or two escaping.

The main Japanese force, which was greatly superior to the Russian force, tried to outflank the Russians, who drew off without losing a man. The Japanese, closing in, found the ravine vacant, save for their dead.

THROWING UP TRENCHES.

A despatch to the London Express from Nagasaki via Shanghai, says that information from a high source is to the effect that the Japanese engineers are sapping their way towards the fortifications at Port Arthur. Under cover of the artillery, new earthworks are thrown up nightly. The trenches are gradually nearing the Russians. The garrison are using shells sparingly, and are evidently reserving their ammunition. Over 200 field guns cover the operations of the trenchmakers. Siege guns have not been used yet. They are being mounted on cement platforms, in commanding positions.

FOR NEW TORPEDO BOATS.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Standard says that the Russian Government is endeavoring to get eight triple expansion engines of 3,200 indicated horse power in Germany for four proposed torpedo boats. The hulls and other parts will be built inland. The correspondent states on the authority of a naval engineer that the Government is much exercised to find men with sufficient knowledge to take out the ships proceeding to the Far East.

FROM KUROKI'S CAMP.

A despatch from Gen. Kuroki's headquarters, via Fusan, says: The present is another period of preparation. The most interesting news cannot be telegraphed because it would furnish clues to future movements. The great strength of the Japanese occupying advanced positions and the disposition of the main forces are unknown to the correspondents and the military attaches themselves, who have practically no information on the subject except what is gathered from the bulletins issued here.

JAPANESE HOLD ROADS.

The Town of Siu-Yen, now occupied by the Japanese army, is of great strategic importance, being situated about 40 miles north-east of Kaiping, and 45 miles south-east of Hai-Cheng. It commands perfectly the roads to both places. Siamatza is also an important point, as it controls the roads to Liao-Yang and Mukden. By following this route the Mao-Tien-Lin pass, a strongly fortified and almost impregnable Russian stronghold, will be avoided on the advance of the Japanese army northward.

Russians DEFEATED.

Gen. Kuropatkin telegraphs to the Emperor, under date of June 8: "A Japanese brigade attacked a Russian detachment occupying Saimatza on June 7. The Russians retired slowly, because of the enemy's great superiority, towards Fenchulin Pass.

"Our losses were two officers wounded and one hundred soldiers killed or wounded."

"Japanese troops are concentrating southward with a front extending more than ten miles from Pulandun to Feng-Tsia-Fang, in the valley of Taisa-ho."

"A Japanese force of two companies of infantry and a squadron of cavalry advanced on June 7 northward from Feng-Wang-Cheng into the Fan-Ta-Fang-Hang district, driving in the Cossack outposts. A detachment of chasseurs and of infantry hastened from Ualind to aid the Cossacks. The Japanese abandoned their attack, having lost one officer and non-commissioned officer captured and several men killed. We had no casualties."

"Outposts of Cossacks on the main Liao-Yang road were driven in June 7, but reinforcements forced the Japanese to retire. Our loss during the fighting, which lasted until 7 p. m., was Captain Liatchko and two soldiers killed and five soldiers wounded."

IS KUROKI ADVANCING?

All Japanese movements are interpreted as caused by anxiety to hamper as much as possible whatever movement Gen. Kouropatkin makes to help Port Arthur. Not only have the Japanese bombarded the West coast of Liao-Tung Peninsula, where the railway runs close to the shore, making feints of debarkation, but Gen. Kuroki has assumed the offensive eastward. He has sent an overpowering, strong column that drove out the Russians from a fortified position at Saimatze, 20 miles north-west of Feng-Wang-Cheng, inflicting a loss of 100 men.

The Russian authorities say that they are without information about the fight at Siamatze beyond the official despatch that was made public on Thursday night, but that the Russian withdrawal was quite in accordance with Gen. Kuropatkin's pre-arranged plan, although the Russian losses indicated stubborn fighting. Military critics profess to be not altogether certain whether Gen. Kuroki's movement means a real advance, or is simply a feint to distract Russian attention from Port Arthur, but they incline to the latter view.

ASSUMED OFFENSIVE.

A despatch to the London Daily Mail from Fusan says that the Russians have apparently taken the offensive. They have reached Suibailing and are advancing to Saimatze along the railway. They are being heavily reinforced. The Russians are now in a half circle around Feng-Wang-Cheng from Saimatze to Liao-Yang. A screen of Cossacks is covering their front. The northeastern roads and passes are strongly held. The Japanese cavalry are scouting admirably. They repulsed the Cossacks in several recent engagements.

STILL EIGHT MILES AWAY.

A despatch to the London Daily Mail, from Chefoo, says that junks are continually arriving. Up to the present nineteen have arrived from Port Arthur, with about 2,000 Chinese refugees, many others are following. The Military Governor allows all natives not engaged in the dockyard and defences to leave. Japanese cruisers intercepted the junks and gave the refugees food, which they needed very much. It is reported that the Japanese land forces are within eight miles of Port Arthur, but so far no important collision has taken place on land near the fortress. Gunboats and torpedo-boat destroyers can navigate the channel at high water, the Japanese sealing operations being effective only as regards the egress of larger vessels. The forts have been much damaged by the recurring bombardments.

TO REINFORCE TOGO.

The Tokio correspondent of the Agenzia Libera, of Rome, telegraphs that a cruiser, four destroyers, two gunboats, and five torpedo boats have been repaired at Sasebo, and have gone to reinforce Admiral Togo before Port Arthur.

JAPAN HAS 400,000 TROOPS.

The Lokal Anzeiger, of Berlin, prints an interview with Gen. Meckel, formerly professor of military tactics in Japan, in which he said he estimated the Japanese strength at 300,000 men and 100,000 reserves. He believed there were still 150,000 troops in Japan. He did not doubt that the Japanese would storm and take Port Arthur, as they did Kinchau. The heroism of the Japanese soldiers was unequalled, and they were splendid marines. The army organization was splendid, and the officers, who were very intelligent, were admirable leaders. He instructed six Japanese officers in 1903. Their knowledge astonished him, and his pupils ultimately became his teachers.

OPPOSING FORCES.

The Paris Matin prints an interview it had in London with M. Suyenatsu, an ex-Japanese Minister, who said regarding Port Arthur that the fortress was besieged by about 100,000 Japanese, while the defenders numbered about 20,000. Doubtless his capture would cost dear, but that was inevitable. The news of the capitulation of the fortress would come soon. If the Japanese took Port Arthur and defeated Gen. Kuropatkin at Liao-Yang they would certainly march north. He would not say they would go as far as Harbin. That was a long way. They would not fortify Mukden, but would occupy a strategic position a short distance to the north. They would certainly go to Vladivostok.

When asked whether with Port Arthur, Mukden, Harbin and Vladivostok in their hands the Japanese could hold them and the railway against the Russians, M. Suyenatsu said: "In preparing for war we thought of everything."

STILL ANOTHER FIGHT.

Gen. Kuroki reports to Tokio that a detachment that was despatched towards Tung-Yuanpu repulsed sixty or seventy of the enemy's infantry at Linchatai on Monday. On Tuesday they encountered six companies of Russian infantry and 800 cavalry at Chang-kiashi. After two hours' fighting the Japanese drove the Russians towards Tung-Yuanpu. The Russian casualties were sixty or seventy. The Japanese lost four killed and sixteen wounded.

SULTAN DENIES IT.

A despatch from Constantinople says: The Porte declares there is no foundation for the reports that the Sultan has given permission to the Russian Black Sea fleet to pass the Dardanelles.

DONATIONS FROM BRITAIN.

English members of the Red Cross have sent £2,000 to the Hon. Charles Nardingo, the British Ambassador, at St. Petersburg, for the relief of the Russian sick and wounded. The Ambassador has handed the money to the Dowager Czarina, who is president of the Russian Red Cross.

KUROKI'S ADVANCE.

The Japanese still prevent any news of what is proceeding at Port Arthur from reaching the outer world, but telegrams from both sides received in London point to the fact that the forward movement of Gen. Kuroki's army has commenced in substantial force. Gen. Kuroki practically threatens the whole Russian front from Mukden to Hai-Cheng. This is sufficient, apart from any question of military science, to make a move for the relief of Port Arthur by Gen. Kouropatkin impracticable.

JAPS WIN AGAIN.

The Central News of London has a despatch from Liao-Yang, of Friday's date, stating that on Thursday Russian scouts were attacked by a Japanese infantry division, with two batteries and five squadrons of cavalry, near Siu-Yan. Several sotnias of Cossacks (a sotnia consists of 160 men) occupied a strong position in a mountain pass, and held the Japanese for two hours. The fighting was severe, and the Japanese lost heavily, but they finally carried the Russian position. The Russians lost one killed and twenty-two wounded.

FIVE LIVES LOST.

Steamer Canada Sunk in the St. Lawrence River.

A Montreal despatch says: The Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company's passenger steamer Canada, Captain St. Louis, while on her way up from Quebec to Montreal, about two miles below Sorol, by the Dominion coal steamer Cape Breton, of Sydney, C.B., which was on her way down the river, light. A large hole was stove in the starboard side of the Canada, which rapidly filled with water and shortly after the collision, sank in about forty feet of water. In addition to the crew there were about forty cabin passengers on the Canada, besides a number of second-class passengers. Fortunately there was a number of barges and river craft in the neighborhood at the time of the accident, and the Canada's crew and passengers, with the exception of one of the crew and four or five passengers, were picked up by the coaler Cape Breton and the other river craft. So far as can be ascertained five lives were lost by drowning, and there may have been some more. So far as identified the dead are: Herlet Bann-Terre, purser; Alfred Thibault, chief clerk in the freight department of the R. and O. Line at Quebec.

Jean Baptiste and Eugene Thibault, aged 17 and 11, sons of the chief clerk. Ovide Prinet, sailor, Quebec. Among the passengers on board were the following from Ontario: Mrs. E. Long, of Brantford; Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Wilks, of Unbridge; H. L. Armstrong, of Toronto; M. D. McArthur, of Toronto, and J. H. Meade, of Hamilton.

The Canada, which was valued at $190,000, and was uninsured, will, it is expected, be a total loss.

LIMIT TO FISH CATCH.

New Regulations Adopted by the Government.

A Toronto despatch says: By the new fishery regulations recommended by S. T. Bastedo, and adopted by the Dominion Government, anglers are only permitted to catch eight instead of twelve bass per day. The limit for muskunge is four, pickerel twelve, and lake trout four, speckled or brook trout thirty or ten pounds. The size limit for pickerel is fifteen inches, for muskunge thirty inches, measured from the point of the nose to the centre of the tail. The sale and export of speckled trout, black bass and muskunge is prohibited for a period of five years, provided, however, that any person from a foreign country fishing in the waters of the province who obtains an angler's license may, upon leaving the province, take with him the lawful catch of two days' fishing.

BELANGER'S HEART BROKE

Peculiar Death of a Murderer on the Gallows.

A St. Scholastique, Que., despatch says:—Theophile Belanger was hanged at 8 o'clock on Friday morning for the murder of Antoine Seguin, his brother-in-law, at Ste. Eustache, in February, 1903. Belanger died at 8.2. He died of a broken heart. The doctor said that as soon as he felt the trap fall fright caused a rupture of the heart. This is the first occasion on which it has been known that after a man has been hanged he has not shown a sign of life, after the drop. There was not even a pulse beat in Belanger's body after he fell. Belanger went to the gallows perfectly composed. He did not look like a man going to be hanged. Everything was conducted in perfect order. There were fifty persons in the jail yard and a hundred outside. The priest of the village held mass at a quarter to 8 o'clock, and all the villagers went to it. Mass was in progress while the hanging took place. Ruffelle was the hangman, and conducted the proceedings without a hitch.

A NEGRO TURNING WHITE

Some People Attribute the Change to Fear.

A New York despatch says: The Tribune to-day has the following from Eastport, Long Island:—Considerable interest is being shown by residents of this section in the case of Silas Ward, a colored man, who is gradually losing his dusky color and becoming white. Ward was arrested for stealing chickens and locked up in the Riverhead jail. It is believed by some people here that fright produced the transformation, which, if it continues will cause him to become completely white in time. Because of Ward's ill-health, which attended the change in color, the jail authorities decided to release him.

PLOT AGAINST CRAR.

Two Infernal Machines Found in His Palace.

A London despatch says:—The Daily Mail, on the authority of a Russian correspondent, says that on the night of June 7 two infernal machines were found concealed in tobacco boxes in the palace at Tsarsko-Selo, where the Czar now is. One was found in the dining-room and the other in the audience chamber. The mechanism of both was working.
