Going to Congress.
A poor man had better keep out of congress. Campaign expenses are heavy and they come every two years. No man can go to congress without neglecting his law practice or his business. If he is a poor man he will probably lose his clients or his customers; a small business or practice will not support partners or managers. After a few years in congress nine men out of ten are beaten for re-election, and then, if they have not a fortune or an established business to fall back on, they will try to get some small salaries paid under the government and may not be successful.

HOW'S THIS?
We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out all obligations made by him.

Walding, Kinross & Martyn, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.
By taking some lime water and blowing one's breath into it a fine white powder will be formed in the water. By adding some common salt to a solution of nitrate of silver a thick white powder is produced which, if placed in the sunlight, will turn brown. Pour the juice of a red cabbage into a test tube or thin glass bottle, drop in very gradually a solution of washing soda, shaking the bottle every time you put the washing soda in, and you will see the red solution gradually turning blue. Go on adding the soda solution, and the blue color will give way to green.

HER SKIN WAS YELLOW.
"I had only to try Dr. Hamilton's Pills to appreciate their merit," writes Miss Anna S. Bryce, of Woodstock. "My system was out of order. My blood was weak and thin. I had a nasty, murky complexion. My skin was hard and dry. The first box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills made a complete change. I felt better at once. Healthy color came into my face. In about three weeks I was cured." Dr. Hamilton's Pills effect an easy cure. Try these good pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00; at all dealers.

Injuries of Life.
The injuries of life if rightly improved will be to us as the strokes of the statue on his marble, forming us to a more beautiful shape and making us sifter to adorn the heavenly temple.

The wise prove and the foolish confess by their conduct that a life of employment is the only life worth leading.—Paley.

WATER IN YOUR BLOOD.
Lots of people have thin, watery blood—they eat plenty but don't digest. When digestion is poor, food isn't converted into nourishment—in consequence the body rapidly loses strength. To positively renew health, nothing equals Ferrozone. It easily sharpens appetite—makes the stomach digest, forms life-sustaining blood. Abundant strength is sure to follow. If you need more vitality, extra energy, better nerves, then use Ferrozone, the medical triumph of the age. Fifty cents a box of fifty chocolate coated Ferrozone tablets.

When the will has force, the way is ever so much more easy.

GRIMMED WITH GREES

FATE OF AN ENGLISHMAN WHO TOOK UP WITH INDIANS.

Married a Squaw and Went to the Bad With Liquor and Indifference—Delay in the Mails Lured Him Into the Miscegenate Marriage—Planned to Go North—A Story of the Early Days of Prince Albert.

If it had not been for the delay in the mail from the outer world, away back in the twenties, when Prince Albert was beyond the rim of the world, De Arcey would not have been lured into a miscegenate marriage, writes a correspondent of The Toronto Star from Regina. If he had escaped the snare of the "daughters of the stranger" he might to-day be living in honor in the halls of his fathers. Now he sleeps under the prairie sod, a victim of the blood lust of an Indian.

Oxford Culture Useless.
It is a story as old as the world, this tragedy of miscegenation, but De Arcey had not learned from his Oxford culture and his prized adventures in the four corners of the world. There was nothing in his lore of books or his experiences to protect him against the sorcery of a pair of dark eyes in a Cree girl's face, hooded by a gaudy Hudson's Bay blanket. There never was when love struts a young man's blood.

The man from Prince Albert told me the story one Sunday as we loafed in the smoking-room of a western hotel. There was a reminiscent light in his eyes as he puffed slowly at his cigar, and so I kept silence for a time, and was rewarded by his tale of the poor fool who came to the western wilds in search of adventure, to meet his fate through an Indian maid's smirch.

Came as a Wanderer.
De Arcey came to Prince Albert away back about the beginning of the eighties, accompanied by an English servant and a band of Breeds guides. He had crossed the then Great Lone Land, from Winnipeg, drawn by the wander lust and was delighted with his experiences in the way of big game among the buffalo and the moose.

Prince Albert was to have been merely a halting and outfitting place, for he had a scheme to penetrate to the far north to the Coppermine River country in the footsteps of explorers. He pitched his tent here, and was entertained at the Hudson's Bay fort and the Police Barracks, in fact was welcomed by such society as the place afforded.

"I was running a blacksmith shop there," said the man from Prince Albert, "and through doing some work for him got to know him pretty well. He seemed to take a shine to me, and was soon dropping into the forge every day for a chat."

The man from Prince Albert was always a shrewd fellow, when he wished to obtain information by suggestion rather than direct question, so I did not wonder that he was soon conversant with De Arcey's plans, and revealing in stories of his wanderings in the Himalayas and other outlandish parts of the earth.

Planned to Go North.
"He told me that he proposed to travel across country into the Coppermine country by dog sled. He wanted to go up to the place where Franklin died, or in search of his remains, or something, but it is so long since, I can't say about the fine points of his plan. Anyway it was the talk about northern exploration that had put the idea into his head. He bought dog teams, and a big outfit, and, through the factor at the fort, engaged a number of guides, Breeds and Indians."

"I never knew," said the man from Prince Albert, "such a man to ask questions about the Indians. He seemed to have read all that was ever written about them, but wanted to find out for himself. I could talk Cree and Sioux pretty good, but it was not long until I could tell him nothing, for he could beat me easy. Of course he was interested in the grammar of their talks, too, but I never could learn English grammar. I wish later on he had never been able to learn a word of the gibberish, which was like the voices of birds, he said once."

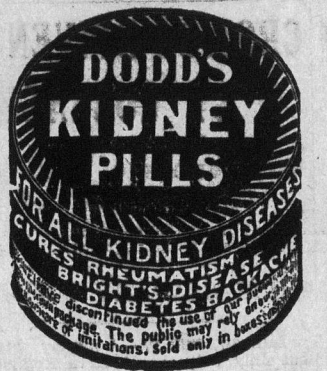

Unfortunate Delay.
"He expected to be able to start for the far north about the 1st of January, but one day he came into the shop, and I could see he was feeling blue. Then I saw English chaps like him is very close about their troubles, and will get mad if you ask them questions like you would an ordinary Canadian. So I did not ask him what was the matter, but I was sympathetic like, and he told me he was all broken up, because letters from his bankers in England sent to New York to follow him up had not come in the time of the year, and it was towards spring before they came."

"He was mopey for a few days, but soon brightened up. Whenever he was not up at the barracks you could find him wherever there was an Indian."

"Me and him got pretty thick, and as his camp was near my log-house we arranged he should move in there. Say, he fixed it up fine with robes and blankets, and as he had a half-breed to cook for us I had no kick coming."

Into Temptation.
"It seemed when his servant got back with the letters it was too late to start out on his long trip so he went down to a Hudson's Bay fort somewhere near the mouth of the Saskatchewan. When he came back he was more than ever with the Indians, many of whom had returned to the fort."

"I was very sorry by that chap Kipling about a fellow out in India who was stuck on a girl with no white half-moon on her finger nail. I have been down south and know what that means. These here officer chaps who wear a few black eyes to remember him by, and shipped him up to the mountains, where they kept him till he got over his fool craze for the girl. I wish there had been a few men of his own case—do not that what they call it—to deal this way with De Arcey. You see, we were friends, but I knew I was not in his class and could do nothing.

Would Take No Rebuke.
"One day a Cree girl named Silver Cloud passed. I had often seen her as an Indian. The officers up at the barracks were not comfortable, and I am going to leave a white man any day to talk to an Indian. The officers up at the barracks are on to it, and they will drop you. Now, look here, I say, I have seen it happen before, and I am going to warn you. The first thing you know you will be marrying a squaw. You'd look like going home to your people in England with a squaw wife. She'd be an ornament up at the Hall, all right. Take my advice and leave Indians alone."

"He looked at me in a way only a white man can, and wanted away. "Things were not comfortable after that, and he moved back to his tent; but we soon made up. He felt ashamed when I saw him with Silver Cloud after that, but neither of us ever spoke of it again. She was a good enough looking squaw, but how a gentleman like him, and a fine looking one, too, could go so crazy over an in-toed Indian girl I do not know."

The Marriage.
"That fall he went out on the chase with her tribe, and when they came back he acknowledged her as his wife. He had sent his servant home, and sold up his outfit. He bought some property up near the Reserve, and settled down there. Of course the society people had nothing more to do with him. He used to come in to see me at times, but it was not the same, and, as both knew it, all his wife's relatives came and lived off him, which is the way of Indians, and he got more and more like an Indian every day. When he came to town he was careless about his dress, and used to get drunk with bums he would not speak to before."

"He people in the Old Country heard about it somehow, and his sister came out to see him. She drove out to see the Indian agent. He knew how things were, and wanted to keep her all night and drive her out next day. She would not hear of that. She said she would be her brother's guest. The agent knew she would not, but said no more."

A Berry Spectacle.
"It was evening when she got to his hut. His squaw, who could talk English, answered her sourly in Cree, and the dirty little children, just started at her. Then she saw her brother coming up from the woods driving an Indian pony loaded with charred logs for firewood. He was a sight to behold. Poor lady! She came back to the agent's house after all. She arranged to have him paid so much money every month, and went back home, and De Arcey did not improve any. What would she do? He would not leave his squaw, and he seemed to have grown to like living like an Indian."

When the rebellion broke out all the white people flocked into Prince Albert, and a white man named De Arcey went to see him. He laughed at the idea, saying he was safe among his friends. His squaw's brother was among the brave who rose, and on day De Arcey saw him come out of the woods near his house in full war paint. De Arcey advanced to meet him, and the young blood in mere bravado shot and scalped him."

There was silence in our little group for a moment, and then the man from Prince Albert blew his nose ostentatiously and wiped his eyes with the corners of his handkerchief, complaining of having caught a cold. De Arcey's body and soul were both dead. He was buried, while the young brave perished in one of the battles of the Rebellion.

Take care of the stomach and the health will take care of itself. If people only realized the soundness of that statement, the majority might live to a good old age like Moses, the eye undimmed, the natural force unabated. It is in the stomach that the blood is made. It is from the stomach that nourishment is dispensed to nerve and muscle. If the stomach is "weak" it can't do its whole work for each part of the body. If it is diseased the disease will taint the nourishment which is distributed and so spread the disease throughout the body. It is the realization of the importance of the stomach as the very centre of health and the common source of disease, which led Dr. Pierce to prepare his "Golden Medical Discovery." "Disease," which originates in the stomach may be cured through the stomach. The soundness of this theory is proved every day by cures of diseased organs, heart, liver, lungs, blood, by the use of the "Discovery," which is a simple and a healthy medicine for the blood and organs of digestion and nutrition. It is a temperance medicine containing no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant.

BRITAIN STILL LEADS.

But the United States, France and Germany Hustle in Building First-Class Battleships.

Despite much talk of reduction of armaments the great powers are still engaged in the great race for naval supremacy.

The annual comparison of the world's fleets issued by the Admiralty shows that Great Britain seems to be lagging behind in the building of first-class battleships. The United States, France, and Germany are all ahead in this respect.

The exact position can be seen at a glance from the following table, which gives the first-class battleships building or to be laid down in 1906-7—

United States	13
France	12
Germany	8
Great Britain	6
Japan	6
Russia	4
Italy	4

Great Britain is better placed in regard to armored cruisers, building or to be laid down during the coming year, having ten powerful vessels under construction, of greater displacement and more modern armament than many existing first-class battleships.

Compared with either the other great powers Britain stands as follows in regard to the armored cruisers building or to be laid down in 1906-7—

Great Britain	10
United States	8
France	6
Japan	6
Russia	4
Germany	3
Italy	2

But if the building figures seem to indicate that British naval supremacy may be seriously threatened in the near future, the British fleet to-day is immeasurably superior to those of any two great powers.

The Admiralty's attitude of secrecy regarding the Dreadnought is still maintained, neither the displacement nor armament of the battleship being divulged in the return.

THE BEEF TRUST.

Men Who Reported Atrocities At Call of President Roosevelt.

The investigation of the Chicago packing houses by Charles J. Neill and James B. Reynolds, specially commissioned by President Roosevelt for that purpose, will doubtless result in a thorough reform of the inspection system in the meat industry. The first inspection was made by George P. McCabe, solicitor for the agricultural department. Messrs. Neill and Reynolds were sent to Chicago to check up McCabe's report.

Charles P. Neill is a native of Illinois who rose, and on day De Arcey saw him come out of the woods near his house in full war paint. De Arcey advanced to meet him, and the young blood in mere bravado shot and scalped him."

CHAMBERLAIN DAY.

Great Tariff Reformer's Seventieth Birthday Celebrated.

Birmingham, Eng., July 9.—Saturday was "Chamberlain Day," and the whole city, irrespective of politics, enjoyed a holiday in honor of the distinguished tariff reformer, Joseph Chamberlain, who Saturday celebrated his 70th birthday. There were decorations everywhere, the city is filled with visitors, and all sorts of processions and entertainments went on. The lord mayor and lady mayress gave a reception and luncheon to Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain. Subsequently, the party made a tour of parks, where thousands of the city school children were being specially entertained.

Mr. Chamberlain took advantage of the occasion to give out a characteristic message to the nation as follows: "Treat foreigners as they treat us, and treat your kinsmen better than you treat foreigners."

THE ROOT OF NEURALGIC HEADACHE.

Is an irritable condition of the nerves caused by cold. Relief comes quickly from Nerviline, the great pain reliever of to-day. I consider Nerviline a magical remedy for neuralgia," writes Mrs. E. G. Harris, of Baltimore. But I never worry if Nerviline is in the house. A few applications never yet failed to kill the pain. I can also recommend Nerviline for stiffness, rheumatism and muscular pains. In use now at fifty years. Try Nerviline yourself.
