Minny people who never think of ente be doubled. Minty people who never think of entering the present morner bones, would mock there under the change that we use contemplating, at first by domain and afterwards by hundreds; and it needs no extract to predict that the askes swould be quicker and more advantageous to both parties where there is a brisk competition. We therefore invite where there is a brisk competition. We therefore invite where there is a brisk competition. We therefore invite where there is a brisk competition. We therefore invite where the remains of difficulty and it is not if any of them should happen to difficulty and it is not if any of them should happen to difficulty any on the subject; dith by the successful pranounce, of the purnels of Agriculture, that the lawness enjoyed by other countries. It would tend very match toward diverting syme part of the atream of emigration to the consist sale of them. It would tend very much toward divorting twine part of the atream of emigration to the laind, if we could show to those atrangers who visit the capital a well, regulated, and well filled Market House, abounding in all that is seconsary or pleasur-

We had some faint boyes from seeing in the Royal Gazette the extracts from the Montreal Sin, and the New Brunsicker headed "Abuse of Public men in the Colonies," that the Editor of the Government Organ was about to set an example of forbearance to us all, but the first glance at the Royal Gazette of Monday last, was quite aufficient to extinguish these hopes had they been of the most ardent mature. Under the head of "organ-pondence" in a letter signed "Observer" addressed to ourselves, and of course distinguished by a tone of the most gentlemanly courtesy, we are highly honored. But we disclaim all the flattering opitiests with with he has thought fit to load us —we are not entitled to them and do not deserve them. Still if it afords him any pleasure to heap up undeserved honors on us he must be allowed to follow the bent of his own good nature. We can't help thinking at the same time that it is a sort of editorial in disguise, or at all events our "most particular friend" has gallantly stept forward on the occasion, with what truth less those who were at the meeting say. For ourselves we will appeal to the Hon. Mr. Lord himself whether it was not as we stated it, and whether he was notheard, and notwithstanding the excitement of the moment fairly heard, and whether the offer staded in our article of the 23d uit. To insert his own or his friends notice of his speechas and observations was not made as there stated,—we fearlessly, we say, appeal to that whether the offer stated in our article of the 25d at the timest his own or his friends notice of his speeches and observations was not made as there stated,—we fearlessly, we say, appeal to that gutleman knowing that however we may differ in politics, he would score to back the untruth of Mr. Whether in politics, he would score to hack the untruth of Mr. Whether is correspondent whichever it may be. As to our or any man's being afraid to allow Ed. Whether to be heard, the thing is ridiculous; as to ourselves we have heard and replied to better men, men whose falents were of a far higher order than those of Mr. Whether were of a far higher order than those of Mr. Whether has the than those of the Hoyal Gazette, would have suffered it to be inserted in a paper under his controul. We will pass over to another of these * Editorials in disgriges" a latter signed "King's County Tenants" and this for the purpose of selecting a passage by way of a text for a very short sermon. The writer having stated that he had read a letter of "A King's County Tenant" and also that of a gallant Colonel of Militia printed in Hazard's Gazette proceeds thus.—

"In the first place, to that of the tenant co-

The King's County Tenant—in Haszard's Gaz-ette—had asserted that Goff and Frost had been tarned out of their respective stations, one for fearlessly doing his duty as Sheriff at the George-town Election and the other for the very vote as above stated. We take the ease of the latter for above stated. We take the case of the fatter for the subject of our discurse. And here we must in the first place observe that there is no discrepancy between the "Tenant" and the "Tenants". It is admitted on both sides, that Mr. Frost was deprived of his office not because he was inefficient or unworthy, but because he was inefficient or unworthy, but because having been appointed to a petty office by the present. Government, he had the ingratitude to vote for the man he thought fittest to represent him, but that is not the extent of his sin, he actually gave a plumper. Poor Frost why did you not act as you were ordered? What right has a W harfinger to an opinion contrary to that of this masters? Did you not know that when you not act as you were ordered: What right has a Whatfinger to an opinion contrary to that of his masters! Did you not know that when you took office under a liberal administration that you were no longer a free man! Were you not aware that from the moment of being sworn into office, that you had sworn allegiance likewise to George Coles and Co. for ever! It is possible that you had sworn allegiance likewise to George Coles and Co. for ever! It is possible that you had sworn and did wise to George Coles and Co. for ever? It is possible, that you, being simply an honest man, did notknow of all this. If so, on that account we excuse you, but the administration will not, nor will the Dietator. Now we have but one remark to make on this—we promise to be short—We always knew that this passive obedience and mon-resistance in subordinates was a principle among the liberals, but we did not expect that they would be fools enough to avow it. They denied it most strenuously at the late elections. It will be out of their power to deny it any longer. And this we think sufficiently accounts for the extraordinary appointments they have made. One word more.—Though this may be the mode of dealing among the liberals, with those over whose situations they have power, we think we may venture to say that it examot be paraeliled in the worst days of tory misrule con in the most despotic periods of the Family Compact.
