Put Yourself in Her Place.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"I think it's perfectly a woman's way to refuse to come where there are children in the home," I heard an indignant young man declare the other day. "Here I've been trying to get a maid for two weeks and she's impudent things refuse to come simply because I have two children. I wonder if they think people shouldn't be allowed to have children." This outburst was received with appreciation by three other young women who all began to vigorously compete for the floor, in order to tell the troubles they, or their friends, or their friends' friends had had with equally impudent maids who dared to object to working where there were small children.

Did you ever attend a similar indignation meeting? If you are a woman I've no doubt you have, for they are being held all over this country, and the almost entire unanimity with which the offending maids are condemned makes me blush for the lack of sense of justice in my sex. We all know how much harder children make the work in any house; how they upset the routine; get things in disorder, create confusion and as the New England housewife would put it, track in the dirt. Even when they are our own children and we love them with all our hearts, we sometimes get out of patience. What wonder, then, that they often prove an unendurable trial to the outsider to whom they are excluded by no tie of affection, and whom they frequently treat with an entire lack of courtesy and consideration. Would you think it outrageous, madam, if your husband, with plenty of opportunities open to him, chose that position in which he would be at least hampered in doing his work? And that is all your maid is doing. Again, I have frequently heard women complain most bitterly because houseworkers are demanding such high wages. "It's ridiculous," says one. "I wouldn't pay that money even if I could afford it," says another. "They are extortioners," says a third. "I think the government ought to do something about it."

Tell me, madam, if your husband were fortunate enough to be engaged in some kind of work in which the demand for workers was much larger than the supply, would he charge as much as he could get for his services, or not?

To get as pleasant and easy a position as possible and get as much money for one's service as possible is the average worker's ambition everywhere in the world.

Why, then, should you blame this particular class for holding this ambition?

If you, yourself, love housework so passionately that you think you would be willing to do it in a stranger's home, work under difficult conditions, and accept a much smaller wage than you had the power to command, you have reason to condemn these people; otherwise not.

Fashions and Fads.

Metal novelties are also coming in for fall, the metal effect being in gold and silver filling threads.

Thick, soft materials, which look weighty but are ideally light, are promised for fall evening wraps. Green with canary and gold with king's blue are among the new color combinations seen in Swiss sweaters.

One of the prettiest batiste embroideries has its dark pattern made of batiste, appliqued on with colored silks.

Dark printed crepes in very quaint designs suggesting those of fowl and years ago are very much in favor.

Besides actual girdles and sashes there are girde-like draperies and vests, which suggest the girde out line.

The Mexican bordered voiles, which suggest drawn work, are much used for semi-dress costumes for mid-summer.

The kimono sleeve will continue for dressy costumes, but with a closely fitted forearm. This necessitates a very large armhole.

A pansy pattern on taupe, wood rose, navy or goblin blue background is the latest thing among printed fleur de soles.

All the new coats or wraps are drawn very close around the figure from the knee down. Very many of them are without sleeves.

All lingerie garments continue very sheer and close-fitting, the trimmings perfectly flat, to accord with the demand for a supple, slender figure.

Rose and black, double faced, are the colors often chosen for the sashes of white voile dresses. Pale yellow voiles have rose or copper color.

The easy dressing of the neck will continue this fall, the open neck being finished with fichu or ruffs, frills or wired collars of the Medici order.

Skirts of brocaded cotton tulle are delightful with summer blouses. Tan rose and blue are the favored shades. Such skirts are almost always draped.

Never before this season has hand embroidery been so important in fine garments, and it appears on the most unwanted materials, such as crepes and rattans.

Some of the new fashions are being out on the circle. Also, they are made from pleatings. No matter how many founces, the foundation skirts will be narrow.

Some of the new sashes are double-faced. Some are tasselled or fringed, and practically all of them are arranged wide around the hips and are knotted at the knees.

The "box back" is a feature in the newest voile waists. The box part is a straight plastron of printed voile down the back, the same printed stuff being repeated in front and in collar and cuffs.

Minimize The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimize the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer.

Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 30 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops.

The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated.

We invite the attention of Farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application.

The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating.

Live Foxes.

Edmonton, Alta., July 10.—Two hundred and nineteen live foxes, ranging from black silver to red crosses, valued at $320,000, have been shipped from Edmonton to points in the provinces of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Alberta, New York and Pennsylvania since the opening of the season. The most valuable consignment, which went forward yesterday, consisted of ten pure black puppies, for which Kane Brothers, of Brooklyn, N.Y., paid $30,000. The animals were sent to Ogden, Penn., for propagation purposes.

Frederic M. Lee, President of the Western Live Fox Company, who recently shipped 24 foxes, valued at $20,000, to breeders in Prince Edward Island, announces that he will not dispose of any more animals to eastern ranchers, having decided to establish a fox farm at Tees, Alta., where 40 foxes are now domiciled. He said: "Advises from Eastern Canada are that prices of live foxes have increased from 25 to 50 per cent during the last 30 days. This slump is accounted for by large shipments through Edmonton from all over the northern country, between the Yukon and the province of Saskatchewan. There will be a reaction next fall, when prices will be higher than they have been during the last few months."

"For trappers in the north are reaping a veritable harvest now, as the foxes are easily obtained by digging the pups out of the holes before they have left the nests. After this month the young foxes will leave their dams and can only be caught singly in traps. This means fewer animals and higher prices."

Ladies and Gentlemen!

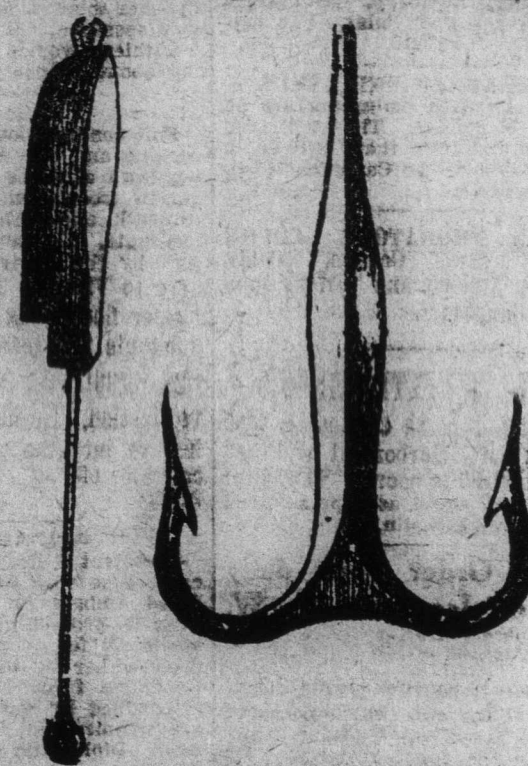

PHILLIPS was RIGHT when he said, "With eyes and books the knowledge of the world is at your command. If your sight is failing, consult us at once. Properly fitted glasses overcome that trouble quickly—and at small cost."

Can you afford to miss the good books, magazines, etc. on account of not having a pair of glasses?

It is false economy to deprive yourself of that pleasure when it is so easily procured.

Consult us to-day about your eyes. We manufacture every kind of an eyeglass made.

HIS MAJESTY

Charlotte Corday.

One hundred twenty years ago to-day Charlotte Corday, a French martyr to the cause of freedom, was guillotined in a painful and abrupt manner by the entire police force of Paris, which at that time was a corrupt and unfeeling body of men.

She was the daughter of aristocratic parents, who kept a hired girl the year around and had the washing done in the basement, and her untimely death caused the late T. Carlyle to exude several yards of blunt blank verse.

At the time of which we write the French revolution was revolting at the rate of about 450 executions a day. It was a dreadful time. People were liable to have their heads removed with the utmost thoroughness at any hour of the day or night, and nobody was happy except the undertaker, who stood in for the administration. After seeing several of her relatives and friends bite the dust with a look of pained reluctance, Charlotte determined to strike one blow for freedom and then cash in.

The leading guillotine artist of the period was a human iceberg named Marat, who had the soul of a patriot and six different kinds of gout. Every morning, before attacking the guillotine, after which he would go to church and pray for his bleeding country. Charlotte concluded that it would be a pious act to relieve Marat of his breath and the gout at one and the same time, so going to a hardware store she bought a large, unused butcher knife and called at Marat's home.

Charlotte found Marat with both feet in a wash tub, trying to think of some body who ought to be guillotined. She was a clever woman, and after taking him off his guard by chatting about the merits of a non-alcoholic cure for the gout she plunged the butcher knife into his cardiac mechanism with considerable vengeance. Marat made a few brief remarks of no particular
