Advice Modestly Given.

If we might presume to offer a word of advice to men so sage as our Municipal Fathers are supposed to be, it would be that, when they meet this evening, they endeavour to avoid snapping, and bickering, and fault-finding one with another, which has been the main part of work performed during the last few nights. There is nothing in the world so conducive to on or about the 1st of July, when his harmony as a disposition to believe, until there be undoubted proof to the contrary, that every person is doing right so far as he knows, and in delierative bodies like the Council, harmony is as essential to the despatch of business as a majority is to carry a resolution. Prompt action, and as little talk as may be, are for the interests of the town at the present time, and these interests Councillors are pledged to promote. We remember hearing a former member of the Town Council somewhat complacently assert that they could despatch more business in one night than the County Council could in two days. Let us hope that this happy knack of dexterity may not be lost, and that grounds may still remain for such a boast. If two animals disagree they fight until strength prevents all future contests. But our City Fathers show no disposition to stop the fight. The wordy and the public business delayed, or sacrificed altogether. Night after night night the gauntlet is thrown down by mediately taken up by some else on the other side; the wordy war waxes al meeting should be called by way of

At the top of the envelope on the left corner are the words, "Head, Monck and Young and Brooks," at the opposite corner, "they know not the Scriptures." Inside we find a sheet of letter paper containing three pages of something resembling poetry. The heading states that it is the "First part of the Paalm or Poem (in three parts) on the Millennium, by the Word and Spirit of Christ, late of Ireland, United States and Ottawa. Written 23rd Oct., 1868." Then follows the Poem, which is evidently the production of a religious monomaniae, being a string of incoherent and unintelligible rhapsodies. At the close the reader is informed that "a copy simulanteously was presented to the Governments of the Dominion and United States on the 18th of November last." It is dated Co. of Kent east, 9th May, A. D., 1869.
