In the House yesterday, in moving the second reading of his bill respecting regulation of immigration into Ontario of certain classes of children, Hon. Mr. Gibson stated that the proposed act was simply a complement to that of 1893. The Children's Aid Society had been doing good work in all the large cities. Attention had been called to the work of the British immigration societies. There had been great difference of opinion as to how far this work should be allowed to go on. A large element of popular opinion held that the importation of these children was objectionable by reason of their physical or mental deference of the proposal proposal personal peculiar into the made been directed into the lament ations of head al to $4.35.
