BLOCK A PEACE PACT Must Be Eliminated From Any Arbitration With Great

Britain. [Canadian Press.]

London, March 29. — The Morning ost points out that the business of negotiating an Anglo-American arbitration treaty is much more serious and difficult than many persons seems and difficult than many persons seem to suppose.

"No one," it says, "knows exact! what the Monroe do trine is, where is begins and where it ends. In popular language is it sometimes so expressed in America as to imply that on the American continent the will of the United States is law and that no European powers can have any rights at all in that continent.

"The first of these for the same transfer of t in that continent.

The first of these interpretations can be accepted by Great Britain, but the second cannot, and if it were sought to exclude the Monroe doctrine in that sense from the provisions of a treaty, it might as well not be of a treaty, it might as well not be drafted, because it would be meaning-less."
