ult was of no use; the harder he bucked, the more the freak whipped and spurred, until Kingbolt's shoulders and ribs looked as though they had been clawed by a wildcat. At last, almost exhausted by his efforts to unseat his rider, Kingbolt sprang into the air and threw himself flat on his side; but the Freak was too wary to be caught that way. No appointment of a successor to Mr. Brown in British Columbia has been made, and it is understood that for the present at least the office of executive agent in British Columbia will be discontinued, the duties being performed by other representatives of the company.

While pleased to hear of his promotion, British Columbians who have the pleasure of Mr. Brown's acquaintance will regret to hear of his departure from the province, in which he has made so many friends by his uniform courtesy on all occasions. Mr. Brown came to British Columbia 15 years ago as city ticket agent at Vancouver, but was soon promoted to be district passenger agent, in which he was succeeded by Mr. E. J. Coyle, upon his appointment to the position he is now vacating.

The official opening of the line took place under somewhat inauspicious climatic conditions but the more important feature of the start, successful running and a well patronized train were all that could be desired. At the Steveston iterminal, nearly five hundred passengers, gathered from the nearby river landing, bearded the train, and at 9 o'clock sharp to the accompaniment to a cheer and shouts of good wishes from the whole Steveston population, the engineer turned on steam, and the train made up of five first class coaches and an observation car, moved slowly out. The train was moving at the rate of 40 miles an hour when two masked men clambered over the ten-fer, and leveling revolvers at the engineer and freman ordered them to stop. The engineer put on the air brakes. The men then ordered
