And in conclusion they give it as their opinion that, unless additional labour can be procured by the introduction of agriculturalists from abroad much of the cultivation of the staple articles of the soil must be abandoned.

The chief means proposed for the remedying of this alarming evil, is the introduction of British labourers. To that end, an act has been passed, to establish Towns, for the reception of Emigrants : and as a preliminary measure, a site has been selected containing four hundred acres, to be called the Township of Altamont, within the County of Surrey; and preparations are making to erect forty cottages, and plant with provision fifty acres of land.

We have been favored with a perusal of the Prospectus and introductory notice to a work bearing the title of "Statistical and Practical observations relative to the Province of New Brunswick, Published for the information of Emigrants, by Alexander Wedderburn, Emigrant Agent, and Secretary to the late Agricultural and Emigrant Society at St. John," now in the Press at St. John, and to which is to be attached a comparative and compendious statistical Table, condensing all the most important relative points of Provincial interest under their several distinct heads.—From our knowledge of the author's indefatigable exertions to procure all the necessary authentic information for the above work, combined with his acknowledged talent, we have no hesitation in recommending it to the favorable consideration of the Public.

LAND SPECULATORS, MILLMEN, AND LUMBERMEN.

A rare opportunity will be afforded them—On WEDNESDAY, the 12th day of AUGUST, next, by the Subscriber, who will dispose of BY AUCTION, On that day at 12 o'clock, at his Sales Room, in SAINT ANDREWS, the valuable Water Lots, situated on the AROOSTOOK FALLS.

The following description of the Falls, near the mouth of the river Aroostook is intended only for Persons concerned in the Lumber Trade, and this branch of it relating to Saw Mills. To such the Plan and description, may convey some useful information, and will be found to agree with the reality on being compared with the situation and spots referred to.

The Boundary Line, as extended by Commissioners in 1819, separating New Brunswick from the State of Maine, crosses the Aroostook about half a mile above the head of the Falls, and the spot between over line and the river, Saint John are situated those remarkable places which form a connected line of Mill Seats not surpassed for natural advantages, on any river in America. From the head of the Falls, a small island at the head of the Falls the river is about 100 yds wide & of considerable depth, but slow current. Its average depth in the summer-time is represented by figures in the plan. It then falls into a narrow rapid channel the bed of which is descending, and where it enters what is called the Basin; the sides, as the intervals continues on a level, are sixty or seventy feet above the water. This channel is quite narrow in some places and is formed by a line of rocks, principally limestone, on both sides to the Basin; but there is no where a fall of water exceeding a foot or so, at a time, except a small pitch of two or three feet which partly encompasses the Basin. The banks of the river are generally high and the breadth of the river below, about one hundred yards, having the channel or deepest water on the north side. The banks of this river above the Falls are generally low, but there is no appearance of the spring freshet rising over them or higher than five or six feet; or overflowing any intervals within many miles of the Falls. Adjacent to the Falls are some considerable hills which as yet, are extremely low, but the Boundary line descends to the Brook, a narrow strip of interval, from the foot of the hill & extends out to the River. This is the only piece of interval which a dam at the island, would be likely to bring under water; but as the necessary dam, if it is to be looked in. From the brook to the island the foot of the hill forms the bank, which at present is rocky and steep, and a considerable height. Below the island to the Basin, an interval fills the space between a hill inclining backwords and the whole length of the Falls. The bank or ridge which partly encloses the basin, continues to the mouth of the river; with strips of narrow interval, six or eight feet above the water. The banks on the northern side of the river, from the mouth up to the basin, have the same appearance; but from the basin up to the island, a steep ridge, skirted by a tier of limestone rocks at the water's edge, rises abruptly over the Falls; and from the island to the Boundary line, the ground gradually descends to some distance from the river, but then continues level out to the rear of the lot. A dam near the mouth of the river would produce a backwater to the basin, as it is, but this would not extend to the foot of the Falls, would not be an expensive job, and if intended to form a head or pond for logs, the whole length of the Falls, would be of no use when done, as no more could be safe in any part of the channel of the river.

A number of small dams is what would require. The Island at the head of the falls, stands considerably above the spring freshet, and by its form and situation between the still water of the pool above, and the rapid descending of the falls below, commands the depth of water to a great distance up the river and all the falls, with whatever works may be undertaken below it. The only proper and to all appearance, natural situation for erecting a dam, to answer conveniently, all uses and designs, is at this island, where the opposite shores are well adapted and suitable in all respects, for that purpose, by their moderate height and approach to the island. A dam at the head of the falls would leave abundance of room for mills from the Dam to the lower end of it, besides producing a backwater several miles up the river; and by means of a flood-gate, which it would be easy to place at the Brook, the river would be raised to a level with the whole of the falls, and let out as required, by placing a dam at the upper end of the rivulet, which runs into the Basin. The ravine down which this rivulet passes is an excellent and safe situation for Mills. Sluice-ways may be carried from the island along the intervals in various directions, to Mills at the Falls or Basin, and continued at a high elevation to the mouth of the River. The same may be done on the Northern side of the channel, for the Ridge at that border is consists of loose sand enough of which might be removed, and the place of an excellent quality for cultivation; but as other more important improvements went on this would soon give place to building lots and trading establishments. Many other valuable peculiarities distinguish these falls; but the great advantage of their local situation is the utmost importance to all who have any interest in the vast resources of this river.

The River Saint John is remarkable for the contraction of so large a river at its mouth; and the Grand Falls, situated just below the French settlement of Madawaska. Many superior Mill seats are found at both, but their magnitude would require far greater means in any undertaking to establish Mills or other public works at them, than would be necessary at any time at the Aroostook, a stream which can be easily managed, and applied to all purposes at a small expense.

The Lots are situated on each side of the river at the mouth of the Falls, and comprise 300 acres on the south side, and 300 acres on the north side. The land, between the head of the Falls and a number of independent situations for Saw Mills and other Establishments.

A PLAN and description of the above Property may be seen at my Office; and any necessary information given. The Terms will be CASH, or ENDORSED PAPER, at 3 months. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the Sale will be postponed till the next day.
