

(Hon. W. S. Fielding in the Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

Newspaper men, in the maritime provinces, especially, will be interested in the announcement that Lieutenant Eric R. Dennis, of The Halifax Herald, and son of Senator Dennis, has been awarded the Military Cross. The young man in question was mentioned in dispatches on a number of occasions, the last time being referred to as follows: "The conduct of this officer stands out above all others, and I cannot recommend him too highly." At the outbreak of war Lieutenant Dennis was on the staff of The Halifax Herald, but at once offered himself for service overseas. He has done splendid work at the front, winning promotion and being recommended for the Military Cross three times within forty days.
