STEWART'S SOLILOQUIES.

The relinquishment of our fisheries! How unlike the British of two centuries ago are those of to-day that would, without a blow, give up a national inheritance, worth in revenue more than that of the whole Empire then. Our Canadian war-ships have simply maintained the construction put upon the treaty of 1818 by the Americans themselves these 69 years. And now, forsooth, because our fisheries have developed unlooked-for stores of wealth, are we to be asked to stand aside until the Empire's imperial friends have helped themselves of our abundance? The French and American Governments well know the false ground they assume in our waters. Nothing fishy at the corner Yonge and Gould Streets. STEWART.
The commerce of the world is based on the exchange of commodities peculiar to each country. The States grow luscious peaches, and Canadians buy them when in demand. Canada owns the finest codfish waters in the world. America as becomes a high-spirited nation, when in demand of their water privileges, should likewise buy, not steal them. The standard stamp of goods reliable found when you buy at the corner of Yonge and Gould Streets. STEWART.
Erastus Wiman, the crafty sphynx, while plotting to get hold of the franchises and valuable privileges of the Montreal Telegraph Company, threw dust in the eyes of Canadian simplicity by donating swimming baths and soft soap. Whose hands is he playing into now with his Commercial Union and boomerang? Like the shareholders of the aforesaid company, how the farmers will whine when they find they have sold themselves and our country for less than a mess of pottage, or even thirty pieces of silver. 'Rastus why can't you be a Briton, since it's not all gold that glitters, all life to live, or death to die? Truth, principle and patriotism are surely more desirable than a traitor's grave. Come with us, 'Rastus, that with your and others' help we may conclude this northern hardy, half-continental history of the universal respectability of the country of the when the gods shall have their day, and are Your consideration earnestly solicited at the corner Yonge and Gould Streets. STEWART.
