Farmer's Calendar.—The engines of nature are prostrated. Clouds of smoke darken the air; and the winter has come upon us in its appointed time. The lakes and rivers are frozen over, and the biting north west wind shrieks around the dwelling. The fields are covered with snow, and the branches are glittering with ice. The woods are silent and deserted; and where a little while ago the blithe melody of birds was heard, nothing meets the ear but the creaking of some broken branch as it swings in the chill blast. This is the month of abundant snows, and all the intensity of frost; yet by this means the seeds of infection are killed, and pestilence destroyed: so the cold of affliction tends to morti-
