At this juncture Secretary McElheran read the resignation of Mr. Nutter, followed by another letter, as follows, withdrawing the resignation: London, July 2, 1917. Chairman and Members Industrial Advisory Committee.

Gentlemen.—At your last meeting an attack was made upon me in connection with my work as architect on the new technical art school. had not the slightest inkling of what brought about this attack, and in the surprise and confusion of the moment I agreed to tender my resignation thinking it would assist in bringing about a proper revelation of the real fact, and knowing that if the real facts were ascertained that my conduct would not be open to criticism. An attempt, however, has been made to injure me professionally, and this resignation has been made to aid designing persons in their efforts to injure me. As you have not accepted my resignation up to now I hereby withdraw it, and leave you to take whatever action you deem wise. surprise package left at his door Saturday evening, such a olg one he couldn't get it up the walk or through any entrance which the parsonage afforded.

At first he couldn't really believe it actually was meant for him. It seemed too good to be true to have a man drive up with a handsome automobile, up to date to the last word in equipment, and offer it as a gift.

An accompanying letter, however, cleared up the mystery and revealed the fact that it had been prompted by the generous appreciation of the Calbot Street Church of the Dressed hogs were little in demand at $19. Live hogs and fat sows sold at $15 and $12 respectively, which is slightly cheaper.

The supply of fruit was not large, but was of a good quality, apples, gooseberries and strawberries, being the extent of the fruit market's variation.
