BRITAIN ANXIOUS ABOUT THE ADOPTION OF JAPAN

Afraid Mikado's Government Will Defeat Object of the Alliance With Regard to the Integrity of China Unless Joint Action is Taken.

PEKIN, Mar. 4.—The British newspapers in China are giving the most serious consideration to the attitude of the Japanese, which they assert will defeat the object of the alliance looking to the integrity of China. The stand taken by the Japanese in Manchuria in the matter of the railway questions, has given rise to much discussion...

The British government is anxious for a settlement of the Harbin question as that a precedent may be furnished to Japan. Upon the decision of the powers, as to whether China intended to convey a settlement of the municipality rights by the railway concession or whether the possession of large tracts of land at Harbin makes the Russian position different from that of the Japanese...

STATEMENT FROM MR. THOMAS

William Thomas assures the Times that the statement in this paper yesterday that it had been arranged in the government committee to put the oath to John McCoach was untrue. It was not in his district and he did not challenge Mr. McCoach. He was not in the booth at all when Mr. McCoach was challenged. He was outside and Mr. Wilson came out and asked him if he was Mr. McCoach. He replied that he was, and that he says all he had to do was vote.

THE GLOBE'S VIEW

The Globe says:—"The result in New Brunswick will not be the surprise to those who have been following events there. New Brunswick has never been divided politically on federal lines. Its governments have usually been coalitions, although the premier has almost invariably been a Liberal. The weaker administration which has just been overthrown lay in the fact that it had, in the last few years, had such able leaders as the late Hon. Mr. Blair, Hon. Mr. Emmerson, Hon. Mr. Tweedie, and Hon. Mr. Pugsley."

THE TIMES NEW REPORTER

HIRAM REJOICES. The countenance of Mr. Hiram Hornboom was suggestive of good cheer this morning. He had a hearty hand-shake for his friends and stepped briskly along as if a weight had fallen from his shoulders. To the Times new reporter he expressed himself thus:—"Well, sir, we done a good day's work. By Hee! I been waitin' fer twenty-five years to help do what we done yist'day. They tried some mean tricks out on me way down here. I give Hazen a same tune didn't you? I s'pose there wasn't any telegrams from Mackenzie an' Mann-er Mr. Morse. How about the drudge? I hear she ain't left the wharf yet--an' that she can't get hard pan anyway--is that so? Well, sir, we done a great day's work yist'day. Now I s'pose Hazen'll get to work an' pick out good men fer the government--won't he? That's what he bettor do if he wants to straighten things out in good shape. We give em a good start--By Hee! I callate I kin pint out a few things we might have done out of the settlement. Things 's been gone' all one way an' that a mighty bad way fer a long spell now. But we done the trick yist'day how, what?"

Settlement, but your Uncle Hiram was right there. I knowed this thing was comin'. I felt it in my bones. When Pugsley follered Tweedie an' got out I said to the boys we'd see a change. I didn't take bolt right. He didn't scrape off the barracks from the ship's state. That's what. But we done a good day's work yist'day. It was hot fer a while, but say--it was a picnic to see old Sile Jones's face when the votes was counted at our booth. An' when we begun to hear how the fight went everywhere, you never seen such a 'glum look in your face. They just bickered fer home, an' we done the shoutin'. I s'pose it was the same way down here. I give Hazen a same tune didn't you? I s'pose there wasn't any telegrams from Mackenzie an' Mann-er Mr. Morse. How about the drudge?
