ORGAN RECITAL AT ST. DAVID'S MUSICAL TREAT

J. Bayard Currie and Other Artists in Fine Program

Though late in the season, with many of the recital going public out of the city, an expectant and approving audience met J. Bayard Currie, and his assistants last night in St. David's church. A critic has said: "Every one teaches, whether he has, or has not pupils." All present were pupils last night, as they listened to his didactic program. The organist's routine brings him weekly before the public, to be unconsciously complements himself, when in his recital work, that public divides new tendencies, and individual outcrochings.

Mr. Currie taught that a man may be sure, yet even sold in rhythm, and not fully digress for emotional details. His musical truths were expressed in quality delicately varying from solo to broad orchestral effects.

Not so many years ago the musician was derided on this. This is an unfair criticism today. The modern musician has entered not only the literature of his own profession, but that of general lines as well. Last night Mr. Currie made explanatory remarks on his numbers, thereby placing his program relative to the "lecture-recital," so popular at the present time. Kindly comments were made on his features by musical friends, who fear that sometimes his modesty compels him to undertake less, never more than he can do.

His numbers included one by his teacher, Henry Dunham, also great German and French composers, the style ranging from very modern harmonies to the real old-fashioned forms. Russell's "Up the Saguenay," Gullman's "Scherzo," from the 5th Sonata, the French numbers, and Weber's "Oberon," were especially commended.

OTHER FINE FEATURES

Mrs. Hugh Miller gave a difficult Jewish number, a negro spiritual, simple in notation but deep in the universality of negro music, and "Peace Troubled Heart" by Pissuti, the Italian who lived much of his life in England. Mrs. Miller is a dramatic mezzo of well equalled registration, with a voice of large compass. She was commended for her interpretation, smoothness and clear diction.

Mrs. T. J. Gunn played a delightful Polish number. As usual, she seemed filled with that sensitiveness necessary in the reception of musical impressions. Tonal beauty, with her, is a strong point. In the White-Kreiser negro spiritual, especially in the first ending, she gave the hearts of her hearers real musical "thrills," but headed them in pretty whispers at the close. Mrs. Gunn accompanied the vocalists with excellent taste.

Clyde Parsons, also great Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria," and Campion's "There Were Ninety and Nine." Each number takes a musician's resources, but Mrs. Parsons neatly adjusted interpretation was equal to the demand. The young baritone has made such evident improvement of late, in tone production, that his future progress should be watched with interest.

R. C. Cruikshank, chairman of the music committee introduced the performers in a neat speech, and several young men conversed by Norman Britain acted as ushers.

Volume of Life of John Bunyan Well Preserved Through Years

A life of John Bunyan, printed in 1882, was brought to the Times-Star office today. It is the prized possession of James A. Hoyt, who secured it from his father-in-law, Samuel Robinson. The book has evidently been rebound, and whoever did the job put the cover on upside down.

The printing is as clear as though the paper were used yesterday, and the work, while slightly yellowed, is still in excellent condition.

MARINE NOTES

S. S. Winona County sailed this afternoon for Liverpool with cattle and general cargo.

The Bellflower is expected to sail tomorrow afternoon for Glasgow with cattle and general cargo.

One of the outstanding features on the bill was the performance of Millie Marie in single trapeze activities and Spanish web. Her vocal solo while suspended upside down in mid-air gave vaudeville numbers here a new flavor.

The Spanish web, which consisted of descending, head-foremost, a rope suspended from the roof of the stage, and at the same time whirling round at a speedy clip, made a great hit.

Strong disapproval of the manufacture, sale or importation by governments, was recorded in the formal and lengthy resolution which covered the subject.

INDOOR CIRCUS IS HIT AT OPERA HOUSE

Lion Brothers' Troupe Give an Excellent Performance With Some Thrills

Their bill, consisting of daring flying ring, equestrian, chair balancing and contortionist work, the Lion Brothers' indoor circus, under the management of John Keeler, opened a three-day engagement at the Opera House last night. The show was well patronized. Ben Webster and his clowns furnished the laughs and their gag and antics kept the audience well amused.

The final act of the show was a feature and the acrobatic work in this act, on the part of the "Flying Keelers," gave all a few thrills. The performance of the lady member of the team was especially good. All Ringling, with novel hand-balancing acts, combined with comedy chatter, was well enjoyed.

Edith Ballas opened the show with a Charleston exhibition. Her swinging ladder number was good, and the daring of her acrobatic work thrilled. The combination ring work and acrobatic Du provided novel and smoothly-executed acrobatic antics. This act proved one of the neatest and epistart acts of the show.

Cleo and Burnett, by thrilling chair and hand balancing, made a great hit. Grace Margareta presented novelties in contortionist work and enthusiastic approval.

One of the outstanding features on the bill was the performance of Millie Marie in single trapeze activities and Spanish web. Her vocal solo while suspended upside down in mid-air gave vaudeville numbers here a new flavor.
