Of Scarfs and Gems and Beaded Bags and Sundry Little Things

New York, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(United Press).—Just now summer styles are well on their way. Everybody knows what is being worn as far as frocks and hats go. It is the new accessories which renew last month's costume and give it a last minute appearance. Too much stress can not be laid on the value of costume accessories. Many women a frock, a hat, and matching shoes and hosiery that they have a completed outfit. But this is far from true nowadays.—The costume has to have some highlight some odd little accessory which catches the eye. This season there are many such accessories. In the first place the scarf is of utmost importance. No well-dressed woman appears in the street in a summer frock that is cut low at the neck and is sleeveless without some sort of a neckpiece to distinguish her costume from the dinner frock. Since dinner frocks and dinner frocks are of like cut and fabrics this year one must wear some sort of a scarf if one does not wish to appear too sleeveless and low-necked on the street. The gayly colored scarf has been pleasant party given by her hostess recently. Miss Dorothy Cochrane, of Montreal, is the guest of Mrs. George K. McLeod, at her residence, Wellington street, where a luncheon was given in her honor today by her hostess. The guests will be of the younger set. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phillips and their daughter, Miss Myra Phillips, accompanied by Mrs. L. Rye, are visiting for some time in the city. They came on Tuesday from their home in Norwood, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. A. Brown, St. John, and their daughter, Mrs. Suffren, of Sussex, accompanied by the Misses Tapley, of St. John, are enjoying a motor trip in Maine.—Sussex Record.

Tucked in her breast pocket was a silk handkerchief which exactly matched the yellow of her hat. Her accessories gave her mediocre frock an important air. And the Jewels. Jewelry is also considered an important accessory and it need not be costly to be important. But—it must bear some purpose toward carrying out the scheme of the frock. Inexpensive jewelry is always ghastly unless its color suggests something that the frock lacks or unless it is decidedly new and interesting to the eye. Even the necklace should be chosen with care. A person with an over-plump throat should never choose a choker necklace. Long chains with pendants are more flattering to the wearer. Persons with slender throats, on the other hand, will find that the choker tends to enlarge the appearance of the neck. And at present we have the new chokers which have pendant attachments which hide the hollow in the centre of the neck. These are new and flattering to the slender person. Choker necklaces continue to use the large round or square beads and when pendants are added they are made of smaller beads of the same shade in flat fringe effect or flat medallions. Square pearls of large size in both gemmetal and regular pearl shades are new and interesting. Both chokers and long chains are made of these. A Little Color. With the dressy frock crystals remain popular and pearl chains with green emerald colored glass placed at intervals are also good. Plain pearl chains are not as popular as they have been. One can purchase intriguing emerald colored beads at the art counters and string them with one's pearls at a small cost. Bracelets continue to be popular. Just now the upper arm bracelet is more popular than the wrist bracelet. There are upper arm bands which have seven and eight rows of tiny pearls attached to a flat glass of silver. Round enamel bracelets are also worn about the elbow. Slave bracelets have proven that they were but a passing fad as one sees few well-dressed persons wearing them. QUEEN SQUARE W. M. S. MEETS The regular meeting of the W. M. S. of Queen square Methodist church was held last evening in the parlour of the church. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Neil MacLachlan, Mrs. S. E. Logan, second vice-president, presided. Miss C. A. Pratt had charge of the devotional exercises. Those assisting were Miss Sarah Smith, Mrs. Logan and Mrs. Robert Willes. Mrs. Joseph Taylor, treasurer, reported a satisfactory condition of the finances. Mrs. Willes, strangers' secretary, reported on visits made during the month. Mrs. Logan gave a reading on home mission work in Saskatchewan. Mrs. Willes gave a reading, "The Tabernacle in the Wilderness." Miss Ada Thompson was pianist and gave a very well executed solo.
