ROOSEVELT TELLS NATURE STORIES

Continued from Page 1. The auditorium of the high school was crowded with students when the colored arrived, and they were all feet and gave him the Chataqua salute while at the same time, they shouted at the top of their voices.

At the Englishman. He said the survivor of another encounter with the lions told him a story which he would repeat. "At one railroad station," he began, "the lions ate up the agent, and when the train came along it ate up a brakeman. The division superintendent, an Englishman, took a German and an Italian with him and went out there to kill the lion. They sat up in the night waiting for the lion, and finally the Italian went to sleep at one end of the car and the German got into one of the berths. The Englishman sat at the window with his rifle on guard. He evidently went to sleep there.

The lion with its queer, sinister intelligence saw that the man was asleep. It came up on the platform, pulled the sliding door open with its paw and went in. The German was awakened by the weight of the lion's hind legs on him. The forelegs of the lion were on the Englishman and the lion had the man's head in his mouth. The German shouted and awakened the Italian, who leaped up and jumped on the lion's back. He jumped off again and ran to the other end of the car. The lion had his man and only wanted to get away with him. It smashed its way through a window dragging the Englishman with him and all through the night the German and the Italian could hear the dreadful purring of the lion as he ate the Englishman.

Before the Colonel departed, he gave the children some advice. To the girls he said: "I don't like to have a girl dance all night so that she will be tired the next day, when her mother wants something from the second story."

His advice to the boys was given in terms of football. It was: "Don't think, don't foul and hit the line hard."

HIGH SCHOOL DANCING DAD

DANCING DAD

Dr. Pomeroy Blames Dissipation For Nervous Breakdowns At School—Parents Generally Ignorant.

Sagamore Beach, Mass., Sept. 1.—In the last address of the Moral and Social Conference, Dr. H. Sterling Pomeroy of Boston delivered a scathing attack against high school dancing. "In general," he said, "a high school dance means late hours, glaring lights, hot rooms, seductive music, great excitement and almost invariably the presence of some young men who are not fit to look upon your daughters, much less touch them. Then there is often the return home solely under the escort of some young man, perhaps a stranger to the young girl except for the acquaintance of an evening."

Dr. Pomeroy said in part:—"We are not considering the question of dancing and secret societies for those in adult life, but those of high school age, which is essentially and emphatically another matter. It is pretty nearly the truth to say that the individual's ethical, moral and religious status is fixed during the four years of high school life. The time when nature, having completed the essential development of the young individual as a child, accomplishes the subtle and unsuspectedly important task of differentiating conscious sex, confirming temperament and offering the supreme choice of the soul, one path leading up, the other down."

"The high school young person is in a critical time, highly susceptible to suggestion of every form. How supremely important that now the atmosphere in which the child-adult lives shall be calm, serene, pure and positive."

"Ask the candid, experienced high school teacher what is the trouble in three cases out of four that the scholar gets poor marks or drops down and out, and the answer will be just one word, 'dissipation.' Ask the candid family physician what is usually behind a nervous breakdown among the high school scholars, and first and foremost he will tell you over-excitement, too little sleep, too much study."

As regards dancing, many parents approve of it on general principles. Few matters of intense human interest suffer more from hasty generalization than just this one of dancing. Very often what the parents believe to be a strictly high school dance is really a subscription dance to which almost any young man may gain entrance who has a gentlemanly deportment, an evening suit and two or three dollars fee."

Dr. Pomeroy said that the average high school scholar had scarcely time to attend to half the duties, responsibilities and advantages of the family, the church and Sunday school, general neighborhood interests and the high school and the secret societies meant a waste of energy. He deplored secrecy in societies of young people. "Secrecy," he said, "however innocent, in itself, is always and everywhere a potential danger."

He urged the necessity of treating different children according to their characters and temperaments, and warned parents that theirs was the responsibility of determining what amusement their children could safely enjoy.

Continued from Page 1. "A steel ship built in this country will cost 35 per cent. more than in England and unless the people of Canada are prepared to make up the difference in some way it would hardly be possible to secure capital to establish a plant here. The demand for British capital is too great to secure any amount of money for such a purpose. Great Britain has been sending $20,000,000 a year for the past five years to Canada where it has been readily absorbed by paying enterprises."

"That is a very interesting question here, isn't it," countered the knight as if he were a Yankee. "Well, how does St. John's attractions compare with Halifax or Liverpool?"

The Moral of Baul. "Have you ever been to Baul?" was the response. "No, Well, it's a town in Switzerland, or rather it was two towns—big and little Baul. They were located on opposite sides of the river, and there used to be a great rivalry between them. In one they built a great clock with a human head, and every quarter of an hour this head used to stick out a tongue curled in derision at the town on the opposite bank. But by-and-bye they built a bridge and the people began to fraternize and find out it was better to pull together than to fight one another. So they took down the clock with the human head and put it in a niche of the cathedral."

VISITING CLERGYMEN PLEADED FOR UNION

Archdeacon Madden and Canon Hanson Delivered Eloquent Addresses to Large Congregation in Leinster St. Church

There was a large attendance in Leinster Street United Baptist church last evening to hear the addresses delivered by the delegates from the Evangelical Alliance, extended a welcome to the visiting brothers from across the sea.

Rev. Canon Hanson was the first speaker and took for his theme the "Principals of Christian Union." After outlining the aims and object of the Alliance the speaker said he believed there was no more sacred duty resting upon Christian people than that of cultivating fraternity between the different denominations. Continuing, he said that there were engaged in religious work more than 400 societies embodying more than 15,000 missionaries, all went forth with the seal of God upon their work. No one church or denomination had any right to claim divine sanction. This claim was merely the result of superstition. The most arrogant church on earth as regards its claim to divine ordinance was the Church of Rome, and yet even she was gradually turning more and more towards the pure Gospel.

To what church did Christ say:—"Behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of ages." Thank God, there is a church within the church, to which God said "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." No church could unite or destroy unity and the only schism to be feared was separation from Christ. The supreme question was not "Am I a Baptist, or a Presbyterian, or a Methodist, or an Episcopalian, but have I been baptized, nor have I received the Lord's Supper," but "have I received Christ into my heart?"

In closing, the speaker made an earnest plea for union and asked, "How long, oh Lord, shall this folly continue?"

Archdeacon Madden was the next speaker and dealt with the practicality of union. He reviewed the great work being accomplished by the alliance in other centres. In United States and Australia the church union movement was making great progress and its objects were beginning to be regarded with favor in Great Britain. In Australia the idea was to unite the Anglican, Presbyterian and Methodist churches. In Scotland there was organized in 1904 a Christian union association composed of leading Presbyterian and Episcopal churches. This was not the result of sympathy but the work of practical men imbued with the spirit of Christ, who were uniting together for the extension of God's kingdom at home and abroad. Referring to the controversy between the Vatican and the Protestants, he said it was nothing more or less than a struggle for religious liberty in the land of the inquisition. No land presented such a history of religious intolerance as Spain, where a vast organization questioned the right of man to worship God according to his conscience. He believed that the present struggle would finally result in a proclamation by the Spanish government that all people of all countries shall have freedom and religious liberty. The alliance had been taking steps to bring about this liberty. It was their duty to help change the conditions in a place where their brethren were unable to say their prayers without interference from the Roman church. The alliance was doing great work standing between the oppressed and the oppressors, and helping men from the darkness of Romanism and Mohammedanism and from the Greek church. The alliance stood for Protestantism in the religious world, and he thought the right of man to worship God according to his conscience should not be posed merely of ministers. There ought to be a membership of at least 1000 in St. John, all pledged to Christian unity and religious liberty.

mer from England with a few hundred pounds than he can find in the prairie country. The Methodist Church in which I am connected is taking an interest in immigrating to Canada, and we have already sent out 60 or 70 families, and located them in Eastern Canada. We feel that they will be better off in the east, because good farming is cheap and conditions more similar to what they are in the farming districts at home than in the west. Schools are plentiful and there are other social advantages that the west at present does not offer."

Sir Robert expects to leave St. John this evening or tomorrow morning.

FORESTERS HAD A PLEASANT SESSION

Delegates to High Court, I. O. F., Returned Yesterday—Interesting Discussions Marked the Meeting at Chatham.

A number of the members of the I. O. F. returned to the city last evening from Chatham, where they have been attending the sessions of the High Court of New Brunswick. Among them were: Geo. W. Jones, M. P. P., of Apohaqui; A. A. Wilson, of this city, and H. W. Woods, M. P. P., of Welsford Dr. J. Daniel, M. P., who was also in attendance at the High Court, came back yesterday. Speaking of the session the delegates said that it was a most interesting and profitable one.

Delegates to High Court, I. O. F., Returned Yesterday—Interesting Discussions Marked the Meeting at Chatham.

There was considerable discussion in regard to the raising of rates and other important questions. Dr. J. W. Daniel, in a brief address, said in regard to the difficulties experienced in regard to the finances of the order, that he felt sure the premium rates now adopted would be satisfactory and remain the permanent rates for the insurance division, and that the prospects for the future were most satisfactory and encouraging in every respect.

Col. Mersereau spoke highly of the order as a protection for a man's family. He had been in the order for twenty-five years, and if he dropped out now the society did not owe him anything. And outside of being a money maker the society had become the greatest fraternal organization of the century.

Rev. B. Thomas spoke hopefully on the state of the order. He said it was making rapid advances, and asked the members to be ready to deprecate any unhelpful notes.

J. A. McPherson said we must not forget we are representatives of trust funds. We are to look after the widow and the orphan, and the courts were holding biennial sessions and get along as well according to his experience.

George A. Wilson said though it may be a great pleasure to us to meet together, we should not forget those who are not having the enjoyments of these meetings, as we do, and he wondered how much benefit the annual meetings were to the subordinate courts.

James N. Wathen said he spoke not from a business standpoint but a fraternal one. These meetings, he thought, enticed new life and new vigor and we go back to our subordinate courts with new energy, believing in our order and anxious to get members into it. He believed in these annual meetings and if they were cut out it would be like cutting off the life of the order.

John Clark briefly stated he was in favor of the annual meetings. He did not know what benefit it could be to the widows and orphans if they were not held.

H. M. Ferguson thought by meeting annually it put new life in us. Dr. C. J. Purdy thought there was no better way to help the cause of Forestry along fraternally and financially than to meet annually.

E. A. McKay strongly favored letting question go to subordinate courts to decide. Rev. B. H. Thomas believed in meeting as often as possible. In the subordinate courts he would advocate weekly meetings rather than monthly. He had a heritage worth working for, he said. He suggested cutting out the per diem allowance to meet the situation financially, unselfishly. We need to keep the governing body strong. Statesmen, politicians, business men say they miss most in their busy lives, the fellowship of home, a mastery and magnetic influence had been brought to bear on his life through the fellowship of these meetings.

Col. G. W. Mersereau thought the discussion had been provoked was discussion that had been provoked, was worth much to us. He believed in the financial part of forestry, but the fraternal side was by far the most important. We should make arrangements to have some one to visit our courts and arouse enthusiasm not forgetting the rural courts. It was finally decided to continue to hold the annual meetings by an overwhelming majority.
