

STREAM OF BIG SNAKES POUR FROM CELLAR

Wriggle Up Stairs in Home Faster Than Family Can Kill

New York, Oct. 25.—"You can't miss it," said the youth of whom the reporter asked the way to Maxwell Miller's house in Palo Alto avenue, Hollis, yesterday. "Keep on past Haywood place and when you come to the house with six snakes stretched out in the road in front of it, that's it."

There were six of them—black snakes, all less than six feet long, but not much. The shortest was a little more than five feet from end to end and they were arranged in order of their size. The house faces Hillside avenue and there's a long stretch of sloping field between the front porch and that thoroughfare. To the right of the house is another black snake somewhere between five and six feet long. It was not quite dead and Mr. Miller was putting the finishing touches to it with a rake.

"Nearby there were three over-size garter snakes and a snake that seemed to be a cross between the garter and the black-snake," Mr. Miller was laying on his back and keeping an eye on the terrace below looking for more snakes.

"Yes," said Mr. Miller, giving the expiring reptile a final whap, "he's the seventh today. The place is full of them. Can't explain it. No other house in the neighborhood has them."

The reporter had made inquiries around the neighborhood and had learned this was the case.

"We've always had them," said Mr. Miller. "Last year we killed forty blacksnakes and so many garter snakes that we sort of lost count. On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Miller, my wife, killed eight."

"Just a minute, please," interrupted the reporter. "Mrs. Miller killed how many?"

"Eight," repeated Mr. Miller. "A big boy about six feet long, another about five, and six young ones ranging from four to three feet six—probably a family coming in for the winter. She was in the house looking out the window and saw the big fellow coming up the terrace."

"Mrs. Miller was a very nervous woman before the snake invasion. Today she is quite well and self-possessed. She can polish off any number of snakes, and she from the rather neutral looking for a snake that seems to be the heritage of humanity she doesn't mind it in the least. But she saw this big fellow and got her rake. She clipped him behind the head and then noticed his wife coming along. She has become expert with the rake and one whop settled the wife. Then she abolished the children."

"We're thinking of writing Dr. Dillman of the Bronx Zoo and asking him to send an expert out to look us over. There's something uncanny about it. Just about this time every year they begin coming. One might explain it by saying that the snakes were a nice warm place for the winter, but why warm places should they concentrate on my cellar? They ignore all my neighbors."

"We've lived here several years and we've always had snakes in the cellar. We got used to it. An occasional snake meant nothing very much to us. We knocked them off the coal pile and scotched them in the bathtub. But they talk about that day we killed the black-snake in the coal bin. But you can go down my cellar this minute and try your luck with the big bruiser that's down there. I'll give you a rake and show you where they are."

"Then year before last I had a well back of the house uncovered. There was something wrong with the pipes and we decided to investigate. There was something wrong, believe me. Thirty-two assorted snakes in the pipes and along the crevices. There was a terrible slaughter, let me tell you."

"Personally, I am not afraid of snakes. Neither is Mrs. Miller, nor my little daughter. Moreover, we take no great pleasure in killing them, but it's really too much to expect a family of human beings to be crowded out by dozens of black-snakes. We've got to kill them in order to have room ourselves."

"Of course the fall season is just beginning. Since Thursday morning we've bagged fifteen and it looks like a big year. This would be a dubious advertisement if we wanted to, but the plug, but we don't. A man from California wanted to buy last year and offered a big price, but we refused. So they can't accuse us of press agentry the place with snakes."

"There's this about their concentration on my place. We Higley Gardens folk can mobilize here and fight the snakes face to face. It's much easier than guerrilla warfare or bushwhacking. We know the snakes are here and we can concentrate on them. We've never had them bigger than six feet and we have never had them in any other place in the house than the cellar—yet."

SUFFERED YEARS WITH ECZEMA

"Fruit-a-tives" Cleared Her Skin

Pointe St. Pierre, P. Q.
I suffered for three years with terrible Eczema. I consulted several doctors and they did not do me any good. Then I used one box of "Fruit-a-tives" and two boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" and my hands are now clear. The pain is gone and there has been no return. I think it is marvelous because no other medicine did me any good until I used "Fruit-a-tives" and "Fruit-a-tives". The wonderful medicine comes from fruit.

He declared the German Government would protest against the recent decision of the council of the League of Nations concerning Upper Silesia on the ground of the illegality of the arbitral award. He said, "The arbitral award is a violation of the League of Nations. This procedure he said, was not provided for by the treaty of Versailles."

Parish Priest Lured From Home And Murdered

Called Out to Visit Sick—Body Found Riddled With Bullets

Lead, S. D., Oct. 25.—Father Balkus, parish priest at St. Patrick's Church here, was lured from his home here today and shot to death.

The priest was called from his bed by a man who represented that he wanted him to answer a sick call. The priest dressed hurriedly and left on foot in company with the man.

Later persons living in the west part of Lead, on what is known as Potoman Gulch road, heard three pistol shots in rapid succession. Persons living nearby investigated and found Father Balkus dead on the road. He had been shot three times through the body. One shot entered his head. There was no sign of a struggle.

The priest wore a cassock over his street clothes. No motive is known for the crime.

HOW FOREIGN WRITERS VIEW ARMS PARLEY

Discussion on Limitation of Armaments from Pen of a Japanese

Tokyo, Sept. 7.—(By Mail).—The forthcoming conference in Washington is a fruitful topic of discussion, with magazine writers and a considerable part of the current issues of the Talkwan (Outlook) is devoted to a consideration of the subject from various points of view. One of the articles in question comes from the pen of Yotaro Sugimura of the Foreign Office who directs his attention principally to limitation of armaments.

This limitation, he declares, is now a universal demand, arising not so much from a desire to lighten financial burdens as from a fervent wish to avert the horrors of war. Much as this is desired, it is extremely difficult of achievement, not only because a numerical or a financial scale of reduction is not all easy to arrange fairly, but rather because it is almost impossible to fix a standard of universal application, and because if an agreement on standard should be reached, it is not all easy to put into effect without some organ by which the agreement may be enforced.

The world's first need today, he says, is an effective instrument to prevent war or rather to guarantee peace, because with the establishment of peace naturally comes disarmament. The League of Nations is good as far as it goes but it is far from complete in that it touches only the material side of the problem.

There is, in Mr. Sugimura's opinion, no hope of a lasting peace until international relations are regulated by the spirit of justice and law, so that all disputes between nations may be settled not by force of arms, but by an appeal to the law. This involves a moral reconstruction of mankind which is still far off and must necessarily be of slow growth.

There is, in Mr. Sugimura's opinion, no hope of a lasting peace until international relations are regulated by the spirit of justice and law, so that all disputes between nations may be settled not by force of arms, but by an appeal to the law. This involves a moral reconstruction of mankind which is still far off and must necessarily be of slow growth.

Though in sympathy with America's good intentions, Mr. Sugimura falls to understand why Far Eastern problems particularly should be brought up for discussion. Trouble is likely to occur in any part of the world, Europe or South America, and yet no consideration is to be given to that. But putting this on one side, he says the most important thing is to explain clearly the connection between the question of armaments and that of the Far East and the Pacific. It stands to reason that the subjects to be discussed must be closely connected with the plan of effecting a limitation of armaments, and they must if necessary include many so-called accomplished facts.

Rather than that, all "accomplished facts" should be recognized, and equal opportunity principle throughout the world, to promote international competition without bloodshed and to enable all to enjoy an abundant and happy life on earth. Mr. Sugimura holds that until the world is ready for the establishment of such an authority, by a higher moral attainment, all that can be expected is that the subjects to be discussed should be recognized as "gentlemen's agreements," in which the main motive power will be a spirit of self-restraint on the part of the signatory powers.

ABLE JAPANESE REPRESENTATIVE AT CONFERENCE

Admiral Kato, Minister of Marine, a Statesman of Intelligence and Courage

Tokyo, Oct. 25.—Simplicity and modesty are the striking traits of Admiral Tomosaburo Kato, minister of marine, who as Japanese delegate to the Washington conference, will fill a most important role in the deliberations there. It was Kato's statement to the Associated Press last year which first let the world know that Japan was ready seriously to discuss the armament limitation. As evidence of sincerity he announced that his country would not necessarily insist upon the completion of the much-talked-of 8-8 program, that is to say, the maintenance of eight dreadnaughts and eight battle cruisers.

Japan's naval minister is not only a man of proven sea calibre but he is a statesman of achievement. A conservative Japanese newspaper said that he could handle all the problems that may conceivably be brought up at the conference with as much intelligence and skill as anybody else. But his strongest recommendation is that of being a man of decision who will not hesitate to assume necessary responsibilities at important moments without reference to the home government.

Kato is really the builder of Japan's modern navy. He has in fact been the head of Japan's marine since August, 1915, collapse of ministers having left Kato unaffected because his capacity was held to be above all considerations of politics. He was born on February 22, 1862, in Hiroshima and after passing through different grades of the service he took an eminent part in the Russo-Japanese war, being the right hand officer of the famous Admiral Togo. He was appointed vice admiral in 1908 and became minister of navy in the Okuma cabinet.

Admiral Kato's long service as minister makes him the senior member of the cabinet next to the premier. A prominent Japanese said of him: "Admiral Kato has a clear head, is mathematical, and well versed on international issues upon which he possesses his own original ideas."

Kato's namesake, Admiral Sadakichi Kato, paid a great tribute to the delegate's intellectual penetration, resourcefulness and rapidity of decision.

"Had he been a statesman, pure and simple," said the admiral, "Kato would have been a great statesman." He is a wide reader and his library includes many books on a variety of subjects. He speaks English language in which he is proficient both as to reading and to speaking.

New Church at Oromocto Dedicated—Takes Place of One Destroyed in Fire

Gagetown, N.B., Oct. 25.—An event of much interest to the congregation of St. Brigid's Church took place on Wednesday morning last, when His Lordship Bishop Le Blanc visited the church and administered the sacrament of confirmation to a class of twelve candidates, six boys and six girls. Previous to the ceremony, high mass was celebrated in the church by Rev. J. J. McDermott, of Sussex, a former pastor; and Rev. A. P. Allen, of St. John. Bishop Le Blanc and party motored from Oromocto on Tuesday afternoon, and were guests of George Owens and Miss Mary Owens until Wednesday afternoon, when they left by motor car for Woodstock.

On Monday last, Rev. W. P. Hannigan, who is also pastor of the churches at Oromocto and Petersville, saw the new church of St. Vincent de Paul, at Oromocto, dedicated after two years' work to replace the structure burned in September, 1919. His Lordship Bishop Le Blanc performed the dedication ceremony assisted by Rev. A. P. Allen, St. John; Rev. M. P. Howland, Kingsclear; Rev. J. J. McDermott, Sussex; and Rev. Father Hannigan. The latter celebrated high mass in the newly dedicated church, and Father McDermott preached the sermon. Forty candidates were present for confirmation.

Oromocto has now four fine new churches practically completed, and representing the Anglican, Roman Catholic, Baptist and Methodist denominations. These are not only additions to the appearance of the village, but are a credit to the people.
