"There is no question that the class of persons which includes the Duke of Argyll, Mr. Gladstone, and Mr. Balfour on this side of the water, and Dr. White across the Atlantic, is of the greatest value to the church and to the State."—London Guardian.

"The very remarkable 'History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom,' which has been recently published by Mr. Andrew White belongs to the same class as the histories of Buckle and Draper.

"Mr White reminds us strongly of Buckle in the general character of his conclusions, in the amplitude of his knowledge, and in the profusion of his references; and he is generally superior to him in the symmetry and proportion of his book.

"His book appears to us to be based on much original research, on an enormous amount of careful, accurate, and varied reading, and his habit of appending to each section a list of the chief books, both ancient and modern, relating to it will be very useful to serious students.

"The book is certainly one of the most comprehensive and, in our opinion, one of the most valuable historical works that have appeared for many years."—The London Times.

"The work answers to its title. It is a complete survey of the whole field of battle. It is, in fact, a series of monographs, each of which tells the story of the struggle with which it deals. His account of the arguments which theologians have used in their defense and of the ready resort of ecclesiastics and ecclesiastical minded laymen to persecution and misrepresentation in their war against the light of scientific truth is most useful and complete. . . . It shows that the warfare of science has never been with religion, but only with old errors that were confounded with it."—London Daily News.
