

RULE VI.

UPON every alarm of Fire, each member, not sick or absent from town, shall instantly repair with his Bags, Buckets, &c. to the House of such person as shall appear most endangered; and shall exert his utmost endeavours to preserve his Buildings, and rescue his moveable property, by conveying it to any place of safety the owner may direct. No Member shall appear at any Fire that may happen after Sun-set, without his Cap, under a penalty of two shillings and six pence.

Alarm of fire.

Caps to be worn.

RULE VII.

EVERY Member addressing the President shall stand; and any person who shall interrupt him in any manner, or converse on any subject during that time, shall be called to order by the President or Vice-President, after which, should he still continue refractory, he shall pay a fine of one shilling and three pence. All motions made and seconded, shall be put to vote, and be determined by a majority, and no motion for the altering any printed rule, shall be considered carried unless there appear a majority of three fourths of the company present in favour of it. Any Member engaging to transact business of any kind for this Society, and neglects performing it, shall pay a fine of five shillings; and any Member who shall, on being requested by the Secretary, refuse or neglect to go the Rounds, shall pay a fine of five shillings. Every Member shall pay two shillings and sixpence for refreshment at each night of meeting.

Interrupting a Member

Motions.

Transacting Business.
Refusing to go the rounds.
Evening's expense.

RULE VIII.

THE President and Vice-President, with the consent of five Members, shall call an extra Meeting of this Society; at which every Member shall attend, under the penalty of the same fines as at a regular night of Meeting. The President shall appoint a Secretary, pro tem, in absence of the regular Secretary, and on his refusing to serve, he shall pay a fine of five shillings.

Extra Meeting
—how called.

Secretary
Pro Tem.
how appointed.