Doan's Kidney Pills

Cured Mr. George Groves, Pitts Ferry, Ont., of a very bad case of kidney trouble.

He tells about the cure in the following words: "I cannot recommend Doan's Kidney Pills too highly. I never took anything that did me so much good. I had a severe pain in the small of my back and could scarcely get up or down without help. I could hardly urinate, but when I did the pain was terrible. I was in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, last winter and when I came out I was some better but not cured. It was then I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. Since taking them I have been completely cured and have not had any trouble with my kidneys since."

A SALVATIONIST'S REUSE.

Baillington Booth Takes Delight In Telling the Story of It.

The efforts of the Salvation Army to relieve the suffering poor during the coal famine recall a story which Baillington Booth, formerly head of the organization in this country, delights to tell.

"The Salvation Army in Chicago started out one winter to assist the destitute by selling coal at cost price. A wagon load of coal was placed in charge of a new recruit, very energetic. When the suffering district was reached, the army wagon was soon surrounded by a clamoring mob. The recruit saw that the crowd was determined to confiscate the coal, but had sufficient regard for the uniform not to do so in his presence. Efforts were made to induce the Salvationists to leave the wagon. His attention was directed to numbers of women and children dying for want of food living in rear rooms of high tenements. 'Would the good man please go in and see her?' But he wouldn't go. Indications now pointed to a seizure of the coal in spite of the army man's presence on top of it. Here was an emergency.

"Single handed this recruit could not cope with the crowd. However, he was resourceful. Removing his hat he began to pray. The people listened. The soldier pleaded that no fearful epidemic would seize the people who used that coal, that warmth and invigoration would ensue and that disease and pestilence be ward off. As he prayed the people became acute listeners.

"When he had concluded, the Salvationist said that he now proposed to distribute the coal that the army had procured at a very reasonable rate, at the municipal isolation hospital, where it had been stored for some time. The last patient had died the previous day of smallpox, and now the authorities, fearful of germs inhabiting the coal, were glad to get rid of it.

"By this time there was no further need of enlightenment, as the nearest living thing was the horse in front of the wagon. He saved the coal by a questionable method. But he was raw and declared that 'everything was fair in love and in war and in the methods of the Salvation Army.'—Detroit Free Press.

Lifeboats.
It is just 113 years since the first lifeboat was launched. Lionel Lukin, a coach builder of Long Acre, was the inventor.

One hundred years ago there were thirty lifeboats stationed on the different coasts of Britain.

The Royal National Lifeboat Institution was founded in 1828. Since that day it has saved 44,000 persons from watery graves. In 1849 a lifeboat capsized on the Herd sands, and twenty out of a crew of twenty-four were drowned.

This accident caused the Duke of Northumberland to offer 100 guineas for the best lifeboat submitted in open competition. James Beeching of Great Yarmouth won the prize.

In 1883 and again in 1887 prizes for the best lifeboat were offered, but it seems impossible ever to design a boat capable of withstanding all the risks of a tempestuous sea.

Paper From Cornstalks.

The western continent has in its Indian corn (Zea maise) a plant of more varied distinct products than any other field crop grown by man. More than forty edible and drinkable articles are manufactured from the grain, and several uses have been found for the stalks and leaves in addition to their value as fodder for cattle. Recent experiments have demonstrated that, chemically treated, a particularly elegant and strong quality of writing and wrapping paper can be produced from the pith of the stalks. It is to be hoped that the demand for paper may soon be more economically supplied from this source than from wood pulp and so preserve our forests for other uses. Corn is an annual crop, whereas trees are the products of decades and centuries. —St. Louis Republic.

The Man of the Music of Today.

Richard Strauss is pre-eminently the denier cri in instrumental music—lender, more strenuous, more complex and more rebellious than any of his predecessors, owing much to Wagner, compared with whom he occupies a position somewhat similar to that in which Corley stands to Tolstoy, yet not only associating himself with the philosophy of Wagner's most trenchant assailant, Nietzsche, but boldly transgressing the principles laid down with such admirable clearness by Wagner himself.—London Spectator.

Street Deaths In London.

A London paper says it is a startling fact that, although the organization and control of traffic in the streets of London are supposed to be of unequalled excellence, nearly eighty persons lose their lives every week upon its highways. Of ninety deaths in London last week resulting from other than natural causes there were one of homicide, eight of suicide and eighty-one of either accidents or negligence. In round figures 4,000 persons are killed each year in the highways and byways of the metropolis.

Submarine Hotel.

Large numbers of visitors are attracted every summer to the submarine hotel near Perdim, on the south coast of France. The building is of steel on concrete foundation and has been fitted with large plate glass windows, which enable the guests to look upon the beauties of submarine life to a depth of six fathoms. Elaborate machinery at the surface pumps air to those immersed below and at the same time drives away the impure air through draft tubes.

More than half the battle in cleaning greasy dishes is in the soap you use. If it's Sunlight Soap it's the best.

STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE.

Are factors of the greatest success. No person can do full justice to himself without them.

In no season of the year are they more easily exhausted than in the spring.

We need not discuss the reason for this here. It's enough to say there is one, and that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength and endurance, as thousands annually testify.

It is dangerous to awaken the imagination without a heavy ballast of principle.

A HELPLESS CHILD.

A weak and puny child is badly handicapped in the battle of life. It is isolated from the healthy enjoyments of its little fellow-beings. It cannot possibly partake either of their play or their sturdy work and progress in the world; its whole life is embittered by incapacity and weakness.

Any woman who expects to become a mother ought to know what Dr. Pierce's favorite Prescription will do both for her own health and safety during her time of trial and also to insure her in bequeathing a fair measure of health and strength to the prospective little one.

HUNKEY-LIKE MEN.

Race of Savage Swamp Dwellers Found in New Guinea.

The Acting Administrator of New Guinea, Sir Francis P. Winter, in a report to the Governor-General of the Australian Commonwealth, describes a curious people who live in the swamps in New Guinea.

They are called the Ahgaiambo, and have lived in swamps for a period which goes back beyond native tradition. They dwell in houses raised on piles about 12 feet above the surface of the water, which they traverse in canoes dug out of logs. These they propel standing up with a pole.

In addition, they are expert swimmers, gliding through beds of reeds or over masses of floating vegetable matter with ease. They never leave the morass, and their mode of life has reacted upon their physical character, with the result that they are not able to walk properly on hard ground, their feet bleeding if they try to do so.

Sir Francis Winter describes two of the tribe—a man and a woman—as follows:

"The man would have been a fair-skinned native, had his body from the hips downwards been proportionate to the upper part of his frame. He had a good chest, and, for a native, a thick neck, and his arms matched his trunk.

"His feet were short and broad, and very thin and flat, with—for a very thick-looking toes. This last feature was still more noticeable in the woman, whose toes were long and slight, and stood out rigidly from the foot, as though they possessed no joints. The feet of both the man and the woman seemed to rest on the ground something like wooden feet would do. The skin above the knees of the man was in loose folds, and the sinews and muscles around the knee were not well-developed. The muscles of the shin were much better developed than those of the calf.

"In the ordinary native the skin on the loins is smooth and tight, and the anatomy of the body is clearly discernible; but the Ahgaiambo man had several folds of thick skin or muscle across the loins which concealed the outline of his trunk. On placing one of our natives of the same height alongside the marsh man, we noticed that the native was about 3 inches higher at the hips.

"I had a good view of the man while he was standing sideways towards me, and in figure and carriage he looked to me more apelike than any human being that I have seen. The woman, who was of middle age, was much more slightly formed than the man, but her legs were short and slender in proportion to her figure, which, from the waist to the knee, was clothed in a wrapper of native cloth."

Adventures of Old Books.

The vicissitudes of second-hand books is a fascinating study. It has often been written upon, but new instances of the ups and downs of old volumes are continually turning up, says The Leisure Hour.

There are many stories of old and rare volumes, and Mr. Salkeld of Chatham reads tells some which will bear repeating. Some years ago this bookseller was commissioned by an Austrian library to purchase a book bearing upon the family history of the Emperor of Austria, which was to be sold by auction. They put a limit of £50, which they subsequently raised to £100, and just before the sale they bade him buy it at any price. The day of the sale came, the lot was put up, Mr. Salkeld made a bid of one shilling, and for a shilling it was knocked down to him! "How was this?" I asked. There had been a dispute about the lot before, two bidders both claimed to have bought it; and it was while almost all the tongues were wagging over this little episode that this valuable book was sold by public auction for twelve pence. "You did not get much commission out of that," I commented. He smiled, and intimated that the purchasers made it well worth his while. The risk that books run may be seen by the following examples: A valuable volume—first edition of Sir J. Elliott's "The Governor"—a small octavo book, had been brought out for a customer to inspect. Though containing the autograph of Lord Cecil of Elizabethan fame, it was not sold. Some days afterwards Mr. Salkeld was looking over the boxes of old books outside his shop, when lo! in a sixpenny box he espied the precious volume. For some days it had been picked up and put down again, and all the while the handlers of the same unwittingly missed the opportunity of getting for 24 farthings what afterwards went for £4. It had probably been carelessly laid on a sixpenny heap, and so was taken out with the lot.

An O'Connell Token.

T. H. Squire, Mount Brydges, Ontario, recently wrote to The Globe, regarding the proposed sale of the Hill of Tara, and the statement that the last important gathering on the Hill was in 1843, when at a gigantic meeting Daniel O'Connell urged the repeal of the union. "I have a coin in my possession," he says, "that bears what I and others have believed to be the image of O'Connell and his harp. On one side is his head only, and on the other his harp and the date 1820. Now if this coin was struck by Daniel O'Connell, I fail to understand how the big gathering you mention took place, for I always understood that O'Connell was only at the head for a very short time."

The token, for that is a better word than coin, might well have been issued to mark the accession of O'Connell to the leadership of the Catholic emancipation party. Granting that in 1820, and from that time until his death in May, 1847, O'Connell was the greatest force in Ireland. At the Tara meeting it was estimated that close upon a million people were present, or one in nine of the population of Ireland.
