Bath Supplies.....

The million pores of the skin are little sewers through which poisonous products should escape from the body. Few realize the importance of keeping them open or realize how much one's vigor and energy is increased by keeping them active.

A Health Recipe

Every morning, a quick sponge bath with cool water to which a handful of sea salt has been added. Then brisk rubbing with a bath rush or loofah until the skin glows and then perspiration starts. It will double your accomplishments for the day.

We have bath sponges, sea salt, bath brushes and loofahs.

Theatrical

DANCERS CLOTHED IN LIGHT.

The latest scientific achievement, one of the most marvellous uses to which electricity has been put in stage craft, is shown in the third act of H. Yale and Sidney R. Ellis' "The Evil Eye," playing at the Grand Monday night.

A feature of the production is the marvellous electric ballet, in which a group of young girls clothed in tiny electric lamps, go through the mazes of a dance, each one of them a cluster of electric lights. The electrical arrangement provided to produce the ballet is very interesting. A huge storage battery supplies the currents and cables run from it to the rigging above. Here the cables are connected with wires which hang down the center of the stage to the floor, each being concealed by a garland of roses. A small wire netting, to which are attached the little electric lamps, cover each dancer, and the connection is made with the current by the girls, whose hands are protected, grasping the wires concealed in the strings of flowers. The effect is exquisite. Although there is said to be a certain amount of danger, there has never been any accident in the ballet. The invention is the work of F. C. Armstrong, who personally manipulates the varying effects at every performance.

LETTER BOX

MR. WHITE'S EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of The Planet:

I returned from Toronto last evening and a number of my friends apprised me of your report of a police court case in which one Phelps is reported to have said he was paying three per cent. per month upon his mortgage to me, and, while I do not think Mr. Phelps intentionally erred in his evidence, I desire to say the rate of interest is twelve per cent. only. I have made other loans to Mr. Phelps, and a new security was taken. In fact, I made him a loan this morning since my return. I think it is fairly well known my rate on chattel mortgages is 12 per cent.

REFUSES TO RESIGN.

The Town Council of Essex has demanded the resignation of W. D. Beeman as police magistrate of that town. A resolution to this effect was put through at the last meeting of the town council, and the matter is now up to the police magistrate. Trouble has been brewing for some time between a certain class of citizens and the magistrate, and the action of the council is the outcome of these differences. It is alleged by a number of citizens that judgments given by the magistrate have not been according to law and that he has allowed himself to be prejudiced against some citizens. As a last resort, Chief of Police Brown preferred charges against the magistrate, which were taken up by the council and, after inquiring into the charges, it was unanimously decided to ask Mr. Beeman to step down and out. The alternative is that if he does no. do so quietly the council will ask the attorney-general to remove him from office.

The office of Magistrate Beeman is an appointment of the Ontario Government and the town council has nothing to say about who the man shall be or how long he shall hold office. In this case no salary is attached to the office and the only remuneration the magistrate receives is fees from cases that he disposes of.

HEALTH IN BRITISH ARMY.

Trodinnick, England,

Gentlemen:—

As a preventative against sore feet there is nothing to equal Kelpion. The many foot powders we had were absolutely useless. I was never troubled myself with sore feet, owing to taking the precaution to rub them with a little Kelpion over night. Many men of my company have asked me at times what's good for a sore heel? I always advised them to use their Kelpion, and after doing so would come and express their surprise to me. I think it a great pity it was not known among the regular troops, for while I was detached from the regiment, I saw some very bad cases of sore throats and feet, and had they had in their possession a pot of Kelpion there would have been no need for so many of them to report themselves sick.

CURIOUS KOREAN CUSTOM.

The Battle of Stones Which Marks Beginning of New Year.

One of the most curious customs in Korea marks the advent of the new year. This is the battle with stones, participated in by inhabitants of Seoul. At a spot about a mile and a half outside the city walls, on the main road to the Han river, the people assemble by thousands either as witnesses of or participants in this truly remarkable exhibition of warlike good will. By previous arrangement piles of stones are in readiness, all carefully selected and of a convenient size.

Without previous selection of combatants the participants form themselves into opposing armies, about the only qualification for service being apparently the ability to hurl a stone at the advancing forces of the enemy. At first the stone throwing is at long range and uninteresting, but as the throwing continues the forces draw nearer, and the fight waxes fast and furious, men being detailed to collect the stones into heaps again or fetch fresh ammunition for the firing line. Then the clash comes, the two bodies meet, fierce rushes are made, stones are discarded, and knives and clubs are freely used. The clash of weapons, the screams of the combatants, the surging mass of men, some being trampled to death, now falling, now struggling to their feet, the blood flowing from numerous cuts—the whole goes to make a picture that depicts anything but the joy we attribute to the coming of a new year. The fight is kept up until the clang of the great city bell tells the combatants that it is time to return home.

Perhaps the most singular feature of the celebration is that during the remaining eleven months of the year the Korean is as amiable a person as can be found in any country, and by some writers the average Korean is characterized as the most abject coward on the face of the earth.

But, cowards or no cowards, the Korean people still indulge, as they have for years, in this annual warlike welcome of the new year. Indeed it is legal in Korea to fight not only on New Year's day, but during the first moon or month of the year. The custom has become a national institution, sanctioned by the government and patronized by the king and the nobility. The police attend the battles, but merely to keep order among the spectators. Fighting is the Korean's privilege with the advent of each new year, and he is expected to exercise that privilege to the extent of his ability if he would be accounted a good, country loving Korean.

Florence Nightingale's Real Name.

The fact is but little known that the family name of Florence Nightingale was not originally Nightingale, but Shore. Her father was a rich Sheffield banker of the name of Shore and connected with an old family which had been in possession of land in the counties of Derby and York since the fifteenth century. Mr. Shore assumed the name of Nightingale long after the birth of his children and because he inherited the fortune and estates of his mother's uncle. There were but two children in the family, both girls. The eldest was named Parthenosse, because she was born in Athens, and this name was supposed to indicate her father's profound admiration for the Parthenon. The younger, Florence, was also named after the city of her birth.

The Retort Judicial.

When Judge Barnard was on the bench and holding court in Poughkeepsie, a lawyer who did not like him chanced to see a one cent coin lying on the floor. Picking it up and holding it forth in ostentatious display, he said:

"I imagine, your honor, from the value of this coin, that it must belong to the court."

"And I imagine," replied Judge Barnard, "that if it was not such a small coin the court never would have seen it."

His Seat.

Mrs. Gaussip—I saw Mr. Stockson Bonds at the upholsterer's yesterday. I guess he's going to get married and furnish a home.
