Upon the plains below
The peasant hears the word,
And shouts with leaping heart.
"Praise Grod—praise ye the Lord?
The mountains ring again.
By myriad echoes stirred.

O shepherd on the peaks,
Who still can see the light,
While shadows fall upon
The plain, and solemn night
Draws near, cry "Praise the Lord—
Praise ye His Love and Might!"

And I will answer from
The plain, though dense and drear
The shadows, "Praise the Lord!"
And conquering all my fear,
Will crv again, "Praise God—
His Love and Might revere?"

And echoes, myriad-voiced,
Thy joy, my trust, shall wake.
Despairing souls shall hear
And hope; the weary take
Their burdens, singing; and hearts
