The Prohibition Campaign.

The latest date on which the plebiscite on Prohibition can be taken is December 1st next. There is thus about eleven weeks left for the campaign. Last night a most important step was taken to put the campaign in favor of prohibition on a working basis. That step was the formation of a special organization to stimulate the electorate in favor of prohibition. A General Prohibition Committee was formed under the Presidency of Hon. R. Watson, with Mr. A. A. Parsons as Secretary and Mr. Downey as Treasurer. The committee consists largely of well-known temperance workers, and others who declare themselves not to be total abstainers, but who volunteered to work for prohibition. On this committee are men well used to political campaigning, whose experience should be valuable to the organization.

In addition to the general committee, a number of sub-committees were appointed for special purposes: such as Organizing, Literature, Campaign, Finance; as far as possible special fitness and experience seems to have been the guiding principle in the selection of the members of the sub-committees. The organization will have an uphill fight against the apathy which prevails in regard to the issue now before the electorate. While there is no open and active campaign against prohibition, there is a widespread indifference to it, and those favoring prohibition cannot hope to win unless they can stimulate at least half the electors, who usually visit a polling booth at a general election, to take sufficient interest in the issue to go to the polls and register their vote in favor of Prohibition. To do this they have left less than three months.

American Awakening

America is beginning to realize that the assurances given by Germany as to a change of submarine policy in regard to liners is as worthless as Germany's signature to the treaty assuring Belgium of the integrity of her territory. Official America is dissatisfied with the German Note exculpating the murderer of the Arabic passengers, after Germany had pledged herself to disavow his act and punish him. It is tantamount to a repudiation of the assurance given to her, and as it arrived in Washington after another flagrant breach of the assurance by the torpedoing of the Hesperian, it is a repudiation by words of what had been repudiated by deeds. The tension between America and the two Central Powers of Europe has been increased by the disclosure of a plot in which the Austrian Ambassador and the military attaché of the German Ambassador at Washington and the Austrian Consul General at New York are implicated. President Wilson has asked for the recall of the Austrian Ambassador, which must be acceded to or President Wilson must dismiss him or recede from his position.

According to a dispatch from Berlin, a semi-official note has been issued there, justifying the acts of the Austrian Ambassador at Washington. These actions of the German and Austrian diplomats and the semi-official condonation of them in Berlin intensify the resentment felt in America against the campaign to in-

Submarine Sunk by a Ruse.

German Craft Took a British Patrol Boat for a Merchantman. New York, Sept. 4.—News was brought from England yesterday of the sinking of a German submarine and the capture of her crew through a ruse adopted by one of the British patrol boats of the Irish coast, in which the Leyland Line freighter Devonian played an important part. According to the report which reached naval circles at Portsmouth, the Devonian was steaming along at about thirteen knots, when a German submarine came to the surface and ordered the captain to stop on pain of being sunk instantly. After the way of the steamer had been checked, the submarine came alongside and her commander told the captain of the Devonian that he was short of supplies, and that if the British captain would replenish his stores the steamer might go free.

This was eventually agreed upon between the two commanders, and while the crew of the Devonian were getting the stores ready to be transferred to the submarine another vessel hove in sight. The submarine disappeared, and coming to the surface again alongside the stranger, the German commanded the captain and crew to leave the ship in five minutes. The newcomer proved to be a patrol boat in disguise. She immediately opened fire on the submarine and sunk her within a few seconds. The submarine had a double crew on board, who were rescued by the lifeboats lowered from the Devonian. No one was drowned, it was said, but all were taken prisoners and are hidden away somewhere in England. It was pointed out that this was not the submarine which had sunk the Arable on August 19th, as the Admiralty had definite knowledge of the sinking of the undersea craft only two days after the disaster.

Man Suicides

FOUND DEAD IN A MEADOW THIS MORNING WITH HIS THROAT CUT.

William Wiseman, aged 71 years, ended his life last night by cutting his throat, and his body now lies at the morgue where it is being prepared for burial. As far as could be ascertained the unfortunate man was thought to be slightly demented of late. Up to three months ago he had been employed as watchman at Knowling's premises. Since then he had not been working anywhere. He had been constantly complaining within the past few weeks and periodically said he felt very sick. Notwithstanding that he had passed the allotted span of years, he appeared to be all right physically. At 10.30 o'clock last night he left his home on Livingstone Street, without telling any member of his family where he was going. Not returning when the midnight hour arrived, a search was made for him for several hours, but without avail. The night advanced and dawn broke, but there was still no trace of the missing man. At 6 o'clock this morning, a man named Noseworthy, who was on his way to work, while passing along LeMarchant Road, noticed the body of a man stretched out on the grass in Buckmaster's meadow, about a hundred yards from the road. It naturally aroused his suspicion and he went to investigate, finding the body of the man Wiseman in a pool of blood, face upwards and cold in death. A severe scar, extending several inches long, was seen on the throat. Alongside was found a pocket knife with which he had committed the deed. The weapon had two blades open and they were very sharp. With as little delay as possible, Noseworthy hurried to the police station and reported the matter. Constables O'Keefe and Walsh, accompanied by Noseworthy, went to the meadow and found the body of the man Wiseman, who was dead. The condition of the body showed that death had taken place several hours previously, and the conclusion drawn was that the unfortunate man had dived up in the field and took his life shortly after leaving his house. The police officers had the body wrapped up and conveyed to the morgue where it was examined by Dr. Rendell. The remains will be sent to the late home of deceased this afternoon. Mr. Wiseman is survived by a widow, daughter and two sons, and much sympathy will be expressed for them.

It was pointed out that this was not the submarine which had sunk the Arable on August 19th, as the Admiralty had definite knowledge of the sinking of the undersea craft only two days after the disaster.
