Wear Your Belt

Loose and Comfortable!

No binding at the hips, no wrinkled trouser-band. Oh boy! there's e-a-s-e on a hot day.

INVISIBLE SUSPENDERS

Keep the Trousers Up and Keep Out of Sight.

Hitch them inside the shirt, grip at both sides. Many men even wear them all the year 'round instead of braces. Let us demonstrate them.

Live-Leather Belts.

They Stretch.

They give with every movement and don't come back to take the sap out of you.

They don't buckle, Kelly—they slide!

A large shipment of our Belts have the new patent clasp; the flap of the belt slides into the slot and fastens; no pulling, no straining, no holes. Adjustable to any size.

Going vacationing? We'll outfit you from head to heel.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

WHEN ALL AGREE.

LONDON, July 21.
Editorially the Times to-day declares that the Crux of the whole Irish situation is undoubtedly the position of Northern Ireland. "Sinn Féin belief in the essential unity of Ireland," says the Times. "Demands formal recognition of that unity as the first step to settlement. Northern Ireland, conscious of its strength in its new position, asserts its right to the status of equality. If Irishmen themselves can find a method of adjusting these conflicting claims, their national problem will have been solved."

DOMINION HOME RULE.

LONDON, July 21.
When De Valera returns to Dublin after to-day's conference with Lloyd George, the prevailing opinion here is that he will carry a sulky document, in which Ireland will be offered Dominion Home Rule within the British Empire, similar to the Government of South Africa. It is understood that the proposals accord considerable measure of fiscal freedom to Ireland, but avoid extending rights of taxation against England, which latter might not be able to be exercised in return against Ireland.

BANK RATE LOWER.

LONDON, July 21.
The Bank of England to-day reduced its rate of interest from six per cent. to five and half per cent.

The Tichborne Trial.

The most remarkable trial of the Victorian epoch was that of Arthur Orton, who claimed to be Sir Roger Tichborne, and as a result he came to be known as the "Claimant." In 1869 an adventurer from Australia, who had read in the newspapers an advertisement seeking information about the missing heir to the baronetcy came to London, pretending to be Sir Roger Tichborne. He pretended to have gone through wondrous adventures, finishing up with his settling down as a butcher at Wapping, South in New South Wales. The pretensions of the man were supported chiefly by the fact that Lady Tichborne "recognised" him as her son. It was shown, however, at the trial that her mind was so possessed by the belief that Roger Tichborne was still living that her recognition was of no legal value as evidence. One witness, who called himself Jean Lrie, swore most circumstantially to the story told by the claimant, but he was convicted of perjury and sent to prison. The case was first heard in the Common Pleas, before Chief Justice Bovill, where, strange to say, it attracted only a moderate amount of attention, though it lasted over 100 days. In the result the claimant was non-suited, and was then immediately arrested on a charge of perjury. On July 21, 1873, he was brought to trial before Chief Justice Cockburn, and the case, full of dramatic surprises from day to day, lasted for 138 days. Eventually the jury found that the pretended Sir Roger was in fact Arthur Orton, a native of Wapping, and being found guilty of perjury he was sentenced to fourteen years' penal servitude. Of the public interest in the latter trial it is impossible to-day to convey an adequate impression. No drama could have presented more theatrical surprises, no romance more sensational. Not the smallest of the remarkable features of the case were a famous speech of Sir John Coleridge, of unprecedented length, in the Common Pleas, the persistency of Dr. Kenally, the claimant's counsel, and a famous summing up by the Lord Chief Justice. The two trials are said to have cost something like £200,000, and of this the Tichborne estate was held to the extent of £90,000. The claimant was liberated in 1884, and died in lodgings in Marylebone on April 2, 1888, having admitted some time before his death that he was really Arthur Orton.
