Graphic Tale Of the Retreat

Trader Depicts Scenes on Man churlan Roads When Kuropatkin Fell Back.

Officers Knew Order to Retire Would Be Given and Packed Their Belongings.

Newchwarg, March 25.—The following story of the retreat from Mukden was given to the Associated Press by a trader:

"I went with the retreat to Tie Pass, I saw it all. I don't want any more. I knew that the retreat was coming. I've seen 'em before. I saw the Boers clear out of Pretoria. I know the signs. The Eussian officers jeered when I suggested such a thing. Taey were packing up their stores, getting their papers together in the various offices. Trunks, boxes, valises of all sorts, were ready to be sent off at a mement's notice. They tried to keep up their bluff until the very last. Cherchoff, the head of the gendarmerle, was a bad same. We had to get our passes from him. We left our passports in his office and he gave us a permit to stay a week, ten days, two weeks, as the case might be, until we sold our milk or brandy, whatever it was Sometimes we had to pay, sometimes not. If Cherchoff sized us up as easy, it went bad with us, otherwise we got off without only a small squeeze. Just the day before the evacuation commenced Cherchoff charged two Greeks $500 apiece for a two-weeks' permit and then cleared out at midnight, leaving the men without their passes.

Boasts in After-Dinner Speech

"There was another fellow in the commissary office who gave a dinner one night. "We have been successful, he boasted in his after-dinner speech. "The Japanese are in retreat. Maybe they will make a stand at Liaoyang; maybe not. I do not think they will. I say they are demoralized. Long Ive the Czar; you see, you said we should retreat. Look at me.

Army Was Demoralized

"The advance was under fairly good control, but the men were more and more demoralized toward the rear. We went with them, for we still had some goods in The Pass, champagne and brandy and sugar and preserved fruits. The Russians went to the east of the railway through a hilly country. On either side of the centre column came the commissary wagons laden with all sorts of supplies. Outside again were the lines of guns and ammunition wagons. The hospital train was hopelessly mixed with the hurrying, panic-stricken infantry. On the finnks squadrons of cavalry were secuting the country, watching for the Japanese.

We had started in the afternoon with a cart. All about us were men jostling, pushing in their hurry. Many did not seem to care at all. They were quite content to be leaving Mukden to its fate. Others were stupid, dazed, deafened by the roar of battle, grimy with smoke, yellow with dust. Their eyes were fixed and staring. Some cursed Kuropatkin. Among the officers there was grumbling. Why should they go back? Why should they be ordered to retreat? They wanted to fight, fight until the end. But mostly they did not care—just slouched along the road.

"The Japanese were away of to the west and shelled us as we went along. If they had wished to do so they could have cut off the whole army. Why they did not do it I cannot understand. It only meeded a sudden dash to throw the Russians into hopeless confusion. It was very bad as it was. The men threw away their boots, their heavy overcoats, their meess kettles. The roadside was littered with discarded equipment of all sorts. As the columns fied across the open they spread out in their hurry. When they had to pass through a valley the crowd crusinated together, fighting its way through the defile, streaming through the back alleys of the little villages and along the hill-sides. Strong men helped their wounded companions. Many dropped from fatigue. There was no room for them in the hospital trains. Their comrades had no litters on which to carry them. They were left in the deserted Chinese houses. Most of the country folk fied and only a few farmers stood gaping, watching us go by.

"As we went farther north it was more and more every man for himself. The commissary wagons had been throwing away cases of soup, tins, great bags of bread, provisions of all sorts, that they might make greater haste. They lightened their loads to save the carts. They had no time to stop and supply the men. The men would not waste time in looking for supplies. They nibbled at the remains of what had been issued some days before or went without anything, going on hopelessly, doggedly.

Sometimes the rider would give his mount to a couple of wounded and lead the beast himself. Many field pieces were rolled into the gullies, others tumbled through holes in the ice. "It was bitterly cold that night. Behind us was the glare of the burning stores and station. The sky was red with the fiaring. The noise of battle rolled off to the west and the south. We could see the searchlights flashing to the east. The shells burst over our heads and came crashing into our midst, lighting up the plain with its hurrying dark figures. Stampeded gun teams rushed frenzied into the heavy fields, through the willow brush, bounding over it, grinding through the low muddy waters, tearing down the stockades of Chinese corn about the farm houses.

SMART MILITARY MARRIAGE YESTERDAY

Wedding of Capt. Muspratt-Willlems and Miss Tyrwhitt-Drake Celebrated.

(From Thursday's Daily.) A military wedding always has charm that is not possessed by any other similar high function of smart societyand of all weddings, and military weddings, too, none furnishes a prettier spectacle than that marking the mating of the brave and the fair, at high noon of a bright May day in sunny Victoria. Such a wedding it was that filled Christ church cathedral yesterday with a distinguished company, a sembled in flower-like Easter toilettes to witness the flower-like Easter tollettes to witness the union in marriage of Capt. Muspratt-Williams, R. A., and Miss Violet Tyrwhitt-Drake, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Tyrwhitt-Drake, until recently of the Supreme court bench of British Columbia. The bride returned but a few months since from the Old Country, where she had been visiting with relatives for several years, and was a very general favorite in this city, herchildhood home. Her marriage marks the culmination of a romance which is said to again verify the survival of love at first sight.

The cathedral was adorned for the interesting occasion with a profusion of floral treasures, most artistically employed. Narcissi and illac were chiefly utilised, and Mrs. Wright, Miss Keefer and Miss Pitts, who superintendent the decorating forces, had the satisfaction of hearing countless exclamations of amazed delight with their accomplishments. The wedding was at noon, and in compliment to the bridegroom, a guard of honor was furnished by the Royal Artillery, there being a full representation of the rank of all branches of the service in Victoria, Esquimalt and Work Point. The ceremony was performed by the Lord Bishop of Columbia, assisted by Rev. Canon Beanlands and Rev. C. E. Cooper, rector of the Church of the Holy Saviour, West Victoria.

The wedding party was commendably recember to accomplish their work, and there is no room for weakness and disease.

The wedding party was commendably prompt in arrival, it being but ten minutes past the hour when the groom, attended by his friend, Capt. Cockburn, R. G. A., took his place at the altar; and almost immediately thereafter the bride entered. leaning upon the arm of her uncle, Hon. M. W. Tyrwhitt-Drake, by whom she was given way. The bride was gowned in white satin chiffou, trimmed with rare old face, and with the traditional veil and wreath of orange bride's roses, and her entourage included her sister, Miss Frances Tyrwhitt-Drake, who was maid-of-honor, wearing a becoming toilette of white chiffon with large picture hat; Miss Joselyn Weaver-Bridgman and Miss Nora Joues, the bridesmands, in white muslin-chiffon; and the little Misses Kathleen Dunsmuir and the little Misses Kathleen Dunsmuir and the commendably strengthes and invigorates the whole human body because it actually forms rich, red blood.

Indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous headache, irritability, nervousness, lack of energy and strength and failure of the bodily organs to perform their functions are almost invariably the refunctions are almost invariably the result of poor, weak, watery blood.

The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the party in taking thin particular trip is cannot be authentically ascertained out it is surmised that the trip was undertaken in connection with the opening of the Corbin route to Spokane and the possibility of making use of the Bonner's ferry line, running in from the south in this connection. That line has been disused for some time past owing, it is said, to the lack of business, but there would not be made to combat the invasion of Jim Hill's territory by the C. P. GREAT NORTHERN OFFICIALS. Heads of Service Pay Visit to Nelso and Vicinity.

Nelson, May 1.—Early this morning a party of Great Northern officials came in by a special train from Spokane on their way to Yahk and Bonner's Ferry. The party consisted of General Superintendent G. T. Slade, General Manager F. E. Ward, Chief Engineer A. H. Hogeland, Assistant General Superintendent H. A. Kennedy and J. R. W. Davis, head of the permanent way department. Capt. Gore of the C. P. R. had been notified of their arrival and preparations had been made in advance for the placing of the car on a ferry and the whole party with but a three quarter of an hour delay were conveyed down the lake to Kootenay Landing, whence they are proceeding east to Yahk and thence returning to Spokane. It was stated that a C. P. R. official, belonging to the staff of President Shaughnessy of the C. P. R. accompanied the party, but this could not be verified.

London, April 19.—Settling down in South Africa is not taking well amongst the men of the battalions of the Royal Garrison Regiment about to be disbanded there. In all 1,642 men are coming home along with their families. Two line battalions will be despatched in about three months time to replace them. It is understood that a considerable number of the men of the fifth batallion R. G. R., at Halifax, will elect to settle down in Canada when the battalion is broken up. The men of the other four battalions are "fed up" with life under the Southern Cross, and not a few say that they will recommence life in Western Canada. The particular service squadron, under Vice Admiral D. H. Bosanquet, arrived home last week from the North America station. The flagship Ariadne will pay off and refit at Chatham at a cost of £16,900.

The appointment of Rear Admiral Hamilton, the new second in command of the China squadron, is to date from the list prox. Captain the Hon. R. F. It is understood that the Egeria will remain on the British Columbia coast line in survey duty till the winter months. It is most likely that she will get a change of station in the spring of next year.

New Service Forage Caps

The new service forage cap which has been approved by the war office is of drab serge mixture and has a peak and chin strap, so that, except in the matter of color, it resembles what most people know as a yachting cap, or the cap which the Household Cavalry has in use. It differs also from the much abused "Broderick" in that the encircling band is stiff, not pliable.

A clever and well-known officer of the Royal Engineers, Brevet Lieutenant Colonel G. H. An admiralty enquiry just concluded here has brought out a rather remarkable state of affairs. The action was brought by the admiralty against the General Steam Navigation Company in respect to a collision between H. M. S. Haughty and 'the defendants' steamer Hirondelle in Harwich harbor in July last. The defence was that the Haughty was not exhibiting proper anchor lights. His lordship found that although it was one of the admiralty rules that anchor lights should be hoisted to a certain height above the deck, the fittings on board the Haughty did not enable the officer in charge to obey the rule. Therefore, while holding that the officer was not in default, his lordship pronounced the Haughty alone to blame. The admiralty does not make so many mistakes as another government. so many mistakes as another govern-ment department that could be men-tioned, but it has obviously in this case

More than a half a million such wemen have found a perfect and permanent cure for their diseased condition in the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Women cured by this remedy say it is a "wonderful medicine," so perfectly does it restore them to health and comeliness.

There is no alcohel in "Favorite Prescription," neither does it contain opium, eccaine, nor any other harmful drug. It is in the strictest sense, an honest, temperance medicine. Its ingredients are purely vegetable, and it will agree with the most delicate constitution.

Don't be hypnotized, or ever persuaded, into accepting a substitute. This medicine has a record that's worth far more than any difference in price.
