A SASKATCHEWAN ROMANCE.

A Chapter from the Temperance Colony's What might have proved a long and ineresting trial was suddenly cut short yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock in the ssize court by the counsel in the cause reto an ante-room and settling the natter. Chief Justice Hagarty presided. It was an action by John Clark of Parkdale against the Temperance colonization piety (limited), to recover $10,000, in the words of the pleadings, "for the deceit of the defendants; or, in case he is not entitled to recover damages against the defendants for their alleged deceit, he claimed in the alternative $10,000 by reason of their breach of their contract contained in the papers and documents, on which terms he stated he was induced to take land from defendants."

defendants."

B. B. Osler, Q.C., and J. T. Small appeared for plaintiff, and S. H. Blake, Q.C., and Allan Cassells for defendants. The court room was filled with friends and subscribers of the company, and the case was listened to as far as it went with much interest.

interest.

Mr. Clark was put in the witness stand and testified that in April, 1882, he resigned his position in the Toronto customs house worth $600 per year. On certain representations from the company's agents witness subscribed for two sections of 1280 acres in the "temperance colony" at the Saskatchewan. Mr. Clark testified about the glowing circulars issued by the com-Saskatchewan. Mr. Clark testified about the glowing circulars issued by the company, and after the issue of a circular in April, 1882, witness took up the company's scrip and paid $128 on each section. He agreed to pay $2560 for the two sections. The scrip, dated April 10, 1882, was for half sections, $64 for each half section. The second year witness paid $128 cash and gave a note for the balance. Witness then related his expenditures and the vicissitudes he inderwent in reaching the colony, the rosy promises of the company's circulars being all a delusion and a snare. His land was not in a block as promised but was not in a block as promised but in alternate blocks, the government owning the even numbers for homesteads. He received a letter from the interior department at Ottawa stating that the even sections were reserved for homesteads, and the company had no power to settle or sell such lands.

The examination of the Hon. D. L. Macrson, minister of the interior, was read, ng particulars of the business of the ty with the department. The minissociety with the department. The minister stated that the government always refused the even sections. The company urged that they were a temperance colonization company, and should be given power over all the even sections. The society never was given different terms than never was given different terms than companies. The pany applied for 2,000,000 acres and was granted 213,000 acres only.

A. M. Burgess, deputy minister of the interior, and Archibald Sinclair were also examined, and after their evidence had been given the counsel retired to the room mentioned above. After half an hoar's conference they informed the chief justice that a settlement had been arranged thus: The plaintiff to receive $3500 from the company and his note for $200, the payments he had made to stand and the scrip of the had made to stand and the scrip of the company held by him to be surrendered, the pleas of fraud being withdrawn. The judge entered a verdict accordingly, and said the jury and himself could feel thankful for their relief from a full trial.

SAVED BY AN ALBATROSS.

The Strange Adventure of a Sailor

A singular story has been related to a by the master of the bark Gladstone, which arrived here from London. While the essel was in latitude 42° south and longitude 90° east, a seaman fell overboard from side shows are getting ready to start out. the starboard gangway. The bark was the starboard gangway. The bark was scudding along with a rough sea and moderate wind, but on the alarm of "Man overboard!" being given, she was rounded to, and the starboard lifeboat was lowered, manned by chief officer and four men. A search for the unfortunate man was made, but owing to the roughness of the sea he could not be discovered; but the boat steered to the spot where he was last seen.

Here they found him floating, but exhausted, clinging for dear life to the legs and wings of a huge albatross. The bird had swooped down on the man while the latter was struggling with the waves, and attempted to peck him with its powerful beak. Twice the bird attacked its prey unsuccessfully, being beaten off by the desperate sailor, battling with two enemies—the water and the albatross—both greedy and insatiable. For the third time the the water and the albatross—both greedy and insatiable. For the third time the huge white form of the bird hovered over the seaman, preparatory to a final swoop. The bird, eager for its meal, fanned its victim with its widespread wings. Suddenly a thought occurred to him that the huge form so close to his face might become his involuntary rescuer. Quick as thought he reached up and seized the bird which he proceeded to strangle with all his might.

The huge creature struggled with wings and paddles to free itself. In the contest the sailor was beaten black and blue, and cruelly lacerated, but he held his own, and slowly the bird quivered and died. The carcass floated lightly on the waves, its feathers forming a comfortable support until he was rescued.

Not Sorry for its Fate. The senate has refused to sanction Mr. harlton's bill for the punishment of seduction and like offences. While we do not approve of the interference of the senate with the legislation of the popular house, with the legislation of the popular house, we are not sorry for the fate of Mr. Charlton's bill. The moral effect of the idea that woman must be the guardian of her own virtue or suffer the punishment is good. The idea that the law will recompense her for the loss of it is bad. There are exceptional cases; the cases of orphians, wards, employes, dependents and weak-minded girls, in whose behalf some legislation might not be objectionable, but for a general principle, applicable to the woman of Canada, the law should recognize that women know enough to take care of them-selves and except the state of the minds of the minds of the state of the minds women know enough to take care of them-selves and are expected to exercise their knowledge.
