toxicants have and are receiving very little attention at the hand of organized temperance. To this position of importance we can assign the various preparations of optum, which include morphine, paregoric and nearly if not all the remedies that are on the market for the control of pain. In this class we would also place cocaine, which renders attractive the 'catarrh snuff' which is sold in every town. Another intoxicant is chloral. Still another—chloroform, and in this same connection we should consider tobacco. alconnection we should consider tobacco, al-though it is much milder than the others

Of the opium group morphine is the most Of the opium group morphine is the most used as it is the most active in its effect. Victims of this drug habit may be found in every neighborhood. It is usually formed by the administration of the drug by physicians for some painful malady. As an intoxicant it produces anxiety, hallucinations of vision and deadening of all sensation. The whole nature undergoes a moral revolution; truth, right and honor lose their meaning. To prevent this habit one prominent writer truth, right and honor lose their meaning. To prevent this habit one prominent writer suggests: 'If on the one hand physicians would always insist on themselves making hypodermic injections of morphine for their patients, never intrusting their syringe and morphine to anyone; and if, on the other hand, pharmacists would never fill a prescription for morphine except for the exact number of times indicated on the blank, and scription for morphine except for the exact number of times indicated on the blank, and once only when there is nothing stated to the contrary, I am convinced that this very simple rule would virtually put an end to morphinism without depriving therapeutics of a precious remedy, because of the abuse that has been made of it.'

There should also be a common law compelling all proprietors of patent medicines to print the formula on the bottle, or file the prescription at the capital of each state for inspection, that people may not unconscious-inspection, that people may not unconsciously become the victims of drug habits. The ly become the victims of drug habits. The cocaine habit is often acquired from nose specialists using the drug, or by using a catarrh remedy containing it. One of its marked symptoms is emaciation. The intoxication is accompanied frequently by fainting fits; sometimes delusions of persecution which renders those under its influence dangerous to a community, and hallucinations of vision and hearing with general mental wakefulness. There is frequently great prolixity in conversation and correspondence. Chloral produces feeble mindedness; the habit is easily established and manifests itself in great depression of the bodily functions.

Tobacco contains nicotine and pyridine. Nicotine causes in small warm blooded animals, in small doses, death in a few minutes, usually preceded by convulsions. Pyridine usually preceded by convulsions. Pyridine causes excitement of the medulla oblongata with rapid paralysis. Europeans learned the use of tobacco from the North American Indians. About the middle of the 17th century its use became general and many rulers attempted to prohibit it. James the First wrote a book against it.

History shows that the height of civilization is often followed by decline and complete downfall; consequently we should profit by its teachings and look with alarm upon any influence which has a disastrous effect upon humanity.

We all agree that a quarantine law to prevent the spread of contagious disease among those who may be susceptible to its contagion, is a wise precedure. Why, then, should we hesitate to enact legislation that will control absolutely the manufacture and sale of intoxicants that can influence generations? Why should we not strive to enlighten each other? Why should not every community be fully informed regarding the physiological effects of intoxicants and the laws of heredity? Why should we not arise as one man and fulfil the requirements of God that our civilization shall not perish from the vent the spread of contagious disease among our civilization shall not perish from the carth?—'Presbyterian Banner.'

An Indiana grocer prints the following in a circular (of course in sarcasm), addressed to his patrons: 'Notice is hereby given that to his patrons: 'Notice is hereby given that if you will come to my store three times a day during the next year, and purchase a drink of whisky each time, paying 10 cents a drink, at the end of the year I will donate five barrels of my best flour, 100 pounds of fine granulated sugar, 100 pounds of rice, 10 pounds of coffee, 10 gallons of syrup, 50 yards of calico, three pairs of shoes, one $10.50 cloak for your wife; and then I will have $10 left to pay for the liquor you drank.'

Dear Editor,—The 'Weekly Witness' and the 'Messenger' have been welcome guests to our home for many years. When the mail comes from the post-office I always ask for the 'Messenger.' The stories it contains are not only interesting, but they are also beneficial to those who read them.

We go to Sunday-school every Sunday and We go to Sunday-school every Sunday and to church afterwards. The church is three miles from our place. I live on a farm twenty miles south of Owen Sound. We have four horses, six cows; we also keep sheep, pigs and hens. We have a red dog called Nero; when he sees me putting in the chickens he puts one in his mouth and carries it into the hern end then lets it go but ries it into the barn and then lets it go, but he never hurts them. I never saw any let-ters from this part, so I thought I would ELLEN.

Britainville, Man.

Dear Editor,—I am one of the many readers of the 'Northern Messenger,' and I enjoy reading it very much. We have taken the 'Messenger,' in our Sunday-school for some time, and, as I have seen, only one letter from Manitoulin Island, and as that one was not from Britainville, I decided to write to you write to vou.

It is very nice here in the spring and summer, as the wild flowers are very pretty and plentiful. We find among the wild flowers the rose, trailing arbutus, the white and the tiger lily and sweet little violets and may-flowers.

I hope 'Elsie P.,' of Manisfield, will write again, as her letters are very interesting. I should be much pleased to correspond with her if she will send her address and write first. I, too, am collecting stamps for missions, but have only about three hundred yet. I value the 'Messenger' for its Correspondence, its Sunday-school helps, and its stories which each have a moral stories, which each have a moral.
