"The officials of that department have most to do with the abattoirs and the property department has little or nothing in comparison to do with the abattoirs.' It was decided to have a conference with Dr. Hastings and Commissioner Chisholm next Wednesday.

> The novel gear engine of Charles H. Clark has shown greater economy in action than reciprocating engines and multi-stage turbines of like power. It is simply a pair of small spur gears with their intermeshing point enclosed between two steam chambers, the whole being contained in a loose-fit ting outer casing.

Steam being admitted from one chamber, it expands, and can only escape from the inner enclosure by propelling the teeth of the gear wheels. The success of this engine where others of like kind-have failed is attributed chiefly to the design of the inner enclosure, which directs the expanding steam against the teeth, and, covering the meshing of the gears only does not interfere with the escape thru
