

MASSEY HALL CONCERT SEASON BRINGS REPEATED TRIUMPHS TO THE HEINTZMAN & CO. PIANO

MADE BY THE OLD FIRM OF HEINTZMAN & CO.

At the annual concert of the People's Choral Union, held in Massey Hall Thursday evening, three concert grand pianos of this old firm were in use. In the choruses, so delightfully rendered by the members of the Union, numbering several hundred voices, a grand piano, placed at either end of the platform, gave constant service. The three to four thousand people who were present at the concert bear testimony to the excellent service rendered by these instruments in the hands of Misses Edna Fletcher and Mabel B. Wells, the accompanists.

The principal solo singing was done by the famous English artist, Mr. R. Watkin-Mills, when the third grand piano placed in the centre of the platform was called into use. Mr. Watkin-Mills knows full well the worth of this great instrument, having sung before it on many occasions when visiting Canada. He has said:

"The tone is sonorous, the singing and sustaining quality just what we vocalists appreciate, and I feel that anyone who wants a first-class instrument cannot do better than secure a Heintzman & Co. piano."

It will bear repeating that in the three great chorus exhibitions given this season:

- That under the direction of Sir Alexander MacKenzie, Mus. Doc., London, Eng.
- The Mendelssohn Choir and Pittsburgh Orchestra under the direction of Mr. A. S. Vogt.
- The People's Choral Union, with Mr. H. M. Fletcher, Conductor.

Concert Grand Pianos of this firm were used exclusively. The reason is obvious. The conductors of these several concerts wanted the best piano. They knew they had it in the piano bearing the name of Heintzman & Co.

THE G.T. PACIFIC.

Editor World: Seldom has a statesman had a severer task allotted to him than Sir Wilfrid Laurier in re-interpreting his railway elephant in parliament; and his having performed the task with respectable success does not make the elephant seem any more pleasant. The changed condition of the London money market offers the premier an adequate excuse for dropping the whole scheme, and he ought to do so. Moreover, the depressed condition of the market is likely to continue for years to come. He does not concede everything that the Grand Trunk shareholders ask, and his new proposals may not meet with their approval, and I hope will not. The general scheme which was presented met the approval of some important minds, such as Sir Sanford Fleming, he hoping that the route would keep to the north, and not go thru Winnipeg. One plan, the quiet, would have been defensible to a certain extent. As it is the government are binding themselves and the country in slavery to a private corporation, without any clear and well digested political purpose in view, are completely giving out the possibility of government ownership in Canada, one might almost say, forever. The Liberal leaders speak of government ownership as a failure, and it has really been a brilliant success all over the world wherever it has been tried, except in a few nations like our own. In fact, where the nature of the route or the competition makes success impossible. The section to be built in New Brunswick will be utterly useless, and will injure the Intercolonial. The section between Winnipeg and Quebec will be a waste of money, and will be a hindrance to the Intercolonial. The scheme is a combination of the sublime and the ridiculous, and it will be of no benefit to the Province of Ontario, and it seems as if intended to punish that province for its political attitude. At the same time the scheme is too subversive to the moneyed interest.

The Deadly Trail

Of disease is often the trail marked by a woman's gown. A recent investigation showed a horde of microbes, including those of influenza, consumption and a dozen other varieties, gathered in the trail of a woman's dress.

The microbes are everywhere, but its prey are the weak and feeble people whose blood is poisoned by the "weak." Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition and purifies the blood. It strengthens the body by increased nutrition to resist or throw off disease.

"Please accept my thanks for the good Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I have taken for my blood. I am feeling much better, and my blood is much improved."—Mrs. J. H. Hughes, P.S.I., and L. L. Klemm, Ph.D. The authors state in a note that for the sketches of the British Isles, France, India, etc., they were largely indebted to W. E. Pakenham, B.A., D. Sc., principal of the Toronto School. The volume is at once a concise and comprehensive review of the educational side of the progress of the century. Justin McCarthy is the general editor of the series.

ANGLO-FRENCH COLONIAL TREATY.

Part to Which Newfoundland Consents Has Been Signed.

Paris, April 8.—The Associated Press learns thru private advices from London that the Anglo-French Colonial Treaty, including the agreements relative to Morocco, Egypt and Newfoundland, has been signed.

The main points of the colonial treaty are as follows:

France surrenders her sovereignty over the Newfoundland shore and receives a two-fold indemnity:

First—For French individuals giving up property along the surrendered shore, and second, for the French government's relinquishment of its sovereignty. The amount of the indemnity to be paid by Great Britain is to be decided by the Hague Arbitration Tribunal.

Morocco figures largely in the treaty. It safeguards Great Britain's commercial rights and insures no fortifications of the Moroccan coast opposite Gibraltar.

The Egyptian agreement does not affect Great Britain's protectorate over Egypt, but is said to be confined to the administration of the Egyptian debt.

Great Britain having a larger latitude in disposing of the surplus without the concurrence of France, France gets improved facilities in reaching Lake Tchad and other points in French Central Africa. This concession, it has been asserted in the despatches, is a partial return for the surrender of French sovereignty over the Newfoundland shore.

Finally the treaty is said to contain a clause providing for equality of tariff duties on goods entering Morocco and Egypt for a period of thirty years, this clause having the effect of establishing the open door in Morocco and Egypt.

The question in regard to the New Hebrides, Paris advises, is not included in the agreement.

NEWFOUNDLAND CONSENTS.

St. John's, Nfld., April 8.—Interrogated in the legislature respecting the negotiations in the French shore question between the British and French governments, Premier Bond said that the Newfoundland government was a consenting party to these negotiations, that it had made suggestions as to the conditions of the arrangement, had pledged its acquiescence in the arrangement if its proposals were adopted, and that any agreement which may be concluded between the contracting parties would be subject to the approval of the Newfoundland legislature.

CANTERBURY TALKS.

London, April 7.—At the Canterbury Chamber of Commerce dinner the mayor presided. Mr. Ames of Montreal addressed the assemblage, and said the British delegates at the Montreal congress must have been convinced that Canada could not prejudice its industries to advance British interests. Mr. Hodgson, president of the British manufacturers' interests would be a primary consideration in any arrangement with Great Britain. He said that the British empire would result in Britain maintaining her commercial supremacy. Mr. Preston said that the British empire would not pay an additional price for colonial products, nor would the colonies pay an increased price under the movement of protection for British products. England was the only great nation taking no interest whatever in the movement of protection for British products. Mr. Preston suggested that, with a proper emigration department of imperial service, an emigration of the population to the colonies.

PASSING STRANGE.

London, April 7.—Desmond O'Brien, who writes letters on books in London Truth, expresses surprise that not a single word of the uncompromising speeches of Messrs. Drummond, Ames and Hodgson made at the British Chamber of Commerce banquet, was published. It is certainly strange, he says, that no English journal thought he heard of the wonders of London, was one evening when we were walking together along the Euston-road.

Look at that fine cat, he said, pointing to one of the animals on a shaded doorstep. In a dark corner like that it would not remain long in my part of Italy.

"Confidences were exchanged, and I found that his liking for cats was much more pronounced than mine had ever been."

"In all the northern part of Italy," said this gentleman, thru an interpreter, "cats are regarded as a dainty, and in Verona, where I lived before coming to England, butchers sell them for rabbits of food."

"The state does not allow them to be sold for food, but the poor people, who are the chief customers, have a shrewd idea of the true nature of these 'cheap rabbits.'"

"Indeed, they buy them as 'rabbits,' and eat them as cats, and I have eaten them many a time."

"They correspond with the English hare, but taste much better. The meat is excellent."

SENTIMENTAL ABOUT TARIFFS.

London, April 8.—Mr. Hall, managing director of the Marconi Company, says that, as the government have a monopoly of the inland telegraph of the United Kingdom, the postal telegraph office must constitute the office of inland telegraph. Mr. Hall says that the Marconi Company has been asked to collect the rates. When a message comes from Canada to England, the inland telegraph system of Canada must collect their own inland rates, the wireless rates from Canada to England and the inland telegraph rates in England. Unless arrangements are made for this collection of both messages and rates by the inland telegraph systems of England and Canada, no public service of value can be carried on between the two countries.

CATS A DAINTY.

Meat as Tender and Sweet as a Nut, Says One Who Eats 'Em.

London (Eng.) Daily Express: During his six years' stay in England the mysterious cat-eating lodger of Bloomsbury seems never to have sojourned long under one roof.

On leaving Guilford-street, on account of his partiality for the feline tribe, he took apartments in Burton-crescent, St. Pancras. Here he stayed three days, and then he suddenly disappeared.

For several days his landlady has seen or heard nothing of him, and cannot tell whether or not he is still her lodger. She does not mind very much, because he said a week in advance. He is said to have left London for a time.

An "Express" representative yesterday learned that the lodger is a native of Azeiglo, a small place in the Province of Turin. He is the only son of a village blacksmith, and for many years he worked at his father's anvil.

Business, however, appeared to be dull, and at last the young blacksmith determined to try his fortune in England, the refuge of all disappointed Europeans.

During one blifful summer he got on well as a handyman in the kitchen of a fashionable Eastbourne hotel.

He heard of the wonders of London, so he obtained employment of a French locksmith in Soho.

This work was not regular, and he eventually found other means of obtaining a livelihood.

An "Express" representative was able to learn from a brother of the lodger's landlady in Guilford-street some interesting facts regarding cats as an article of food.

"In all the northern part of Italy," said this gentleman, thru an interpreter, "cats are regarded as a dainty, and in Verona, where I lived before coming to England, butchers sell them for rabbits of food."

"The state does not allow them to be sold for food, but the poor people, who are the chief customers, have a shrewd idea of the true nature of these 'cheap rabbits.'"

"Indeed, they buy them as 'rabbits,' and eat them as cats, and I have eaten them many a time."

"They correspond with the English hare, but taste much better. The meat is excellent."

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM.

This is a condition (or disease) to which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a breakdown in a word, of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its causes (for they are almost innumerable), its symptoms are such that the more prominent being depression of spirits, prostration or weakness, depression of spirits, and weight of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. Now, what alone is absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigor.
