Demoralized Conditions on New York Market Have Tendency to Restrain Trading on Smaller Exchanges.

World Office, Saturday Evening, June 4th. The local mining markets during the ast week have shown no outstanding features and trading has been about as dull as possible. Public interest has at no time been a tangible quantity in the dealings and such transactions as have been put thru have been set down as professional operations rather than any outside buying movement. The demoralized condition of the New York stock market has no doubt had an influence all its own in putting a check of greater or less extent on speculation in all classes of securities, and with interest attracted daily to the violent movements on the larger markets, it has been only natural to experience a species of apathy on the mining exchanges. It has been apparent, however, and this is the redeeming feature of the situation at the present moment, that, while there is no buying movement of any consequence being met in connection with the Cobalts, there is no great inclination to sell stocks at prevailing low figures. As long as conditions maintain as at present there is little likelihood of any recovery being made, but on the other hand as long as liquidation can be held in check there is not much fear of a future break in prices. have been put thru have been set down
