

REPORT.

AGAIN your Committee present you with a summary of their proceedings during the past year, and a record of what has been done by both clergy and laity to advance the interests of the Church in this Island.

Your Committee believe that in no respect have the clergy remitted their efforts for the general good, and they observe, with much satisfaction, that in some localities there has been a decided advance in congregational attachment to the Church, and much sympathy and respect evinced to the officiating clergymen.

There has been, during the past year, much awakening and revival in the Church generally; and your Committee trust that their own branch of Christ's church has not been without corresponding tokens of the Lord's blessing upon faithful preaching, and upon the weekly meetings for prayer and reading the Scriptures.

Your Committee have confidence in the perfect adaptation of the Church of England's ministry and services for the growth of true religion in any community; but to effect progress as a Church, holiness and devotion must be the characteristic of ministers and people; and they cannot forbear pressing upon all, the necessity of united effort and united prayer. Your Committee know that ritual worship is according to God's will, and that our church does lift up amongst men the cross of Christ, and does faithfully open up God's word; and they are persuaded that a pious and earnest exhibition of its doctrines in the lives and hearts of its members, will disarm
