Bulger's Fall Over the "Terrible Precipice." A Story for Wee Ones By Helena Davis.

If She Was a Fairy

"I'd drive frowns from all faces, And bring smiles there instead;

In fact, I'd wave my little wand
O'er everybody's head,
"And ask what most was wished for;
And each wish should granted be—
Unless some evil person
Made a wicked wish, you see."

"What is Bruver? Did he fall down the mountain?"

"Wait, I'll find him," said the guide, and Teddy crept cautiously to the side of the Great Precipice, and peeped over. There lying on his back on some loose hay, which had slipped to the ground with him, was little funny fat Bulger, smiling and happy. He was watching a great butterfly circling about, and did not seem to mind having gone to the bottom of the Alps so unceremoniously and unexpectedly.

"What did you go down for, Bulger?" asked Teddy, peeping down on him.

"I fell ober da mountain," explained Bulger. "But it didn't hu't me any. It was fun."

"Oh, he fell over the Great Precipice," "What's 'come o' him?" you'il hear him ast, days on the foll of the fall down and the guide, and wicked wish, you see."

Made a wicked wish, you see."

Had An Eye for Business

The new undertaker, Mr. Johnson, was business from the time he got up in the morning until his snores startled the neighbors at night. The idea came to him to buy a new motor hearse. He did so, and called a friend around to his "dead parlors" to inspect the latest improvement to the business.

"That's splendid, Johnson," said the friend, "people will be just dying to take a ride in it!"
