DISMISSED THE CASE.

Justice Drake dismisses the Charge Against Paster Reims.

In the Supreme Court this morning the charge of rape against Rev. Alfred Reims of Merced, Cal., was dismissed by Justice Drake. Lindley Crease, the prosecuting attorney, said that he had no further evidence to offer on the charge, and the court said the evidence at the trial a week ago was sufficient to hold a man on such a charge, according to Canadian law. Reims was in court and bowed very politely when he heard the sentence. His son, William, aged 15, sat near his father, and walked alongside him and the policeman to the provincial jail. Reims was questioned whether he would consent to return on the abduction charge before the arrival of extradition papers. He said he would not say. Sheriff Warfield will take back the boy with his father and find him work in Merced. The boy says he prefers to stay in Victoria.

Law Intelligence.

To-morrow being Dominion Day the Law Courts and law offices will be closed.

Mr. Justice Drake sat at 11.30 to hear additional evidence in the case of Croft vs. Bouchier and Hamlin. Mr. Bodwell appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Eberts, C. C., for the defendant Hamlin, his co-defendant having allowed judgment to be taken by default of appearance. The books of the firm of Bouchier, Croft & Hamlin were produced and admitted for their truthful binding, but there were no entries of business transactions as it was stated in evidence that no business was done during the brief period that the partnership lasted. His Lordship reserved judgment.

The Chief Justice has had before him for a short time what promises to give the editor of Truth something to say about the administration of justice by British Columbia magistrates. Three intelligent magistrates of New Westminster city set to hear charges against a number of Chinamen. They adjourned the case for a week and then, before the time expired, heard the charge and fined each of the defendants in his absence, notwithstanding the vigorous protests of counsel. Mr. H. D. Helmeke has taken the matter before the Chief Justice on certiorari. The case was adjourned to enable recognizances to be filed with the registrar of the court. The Chief Justice condemned in severe terms the manner in which the three magistrates "administered justice."

DANGERS OF PORTIER PASS.

What the Investigations of the Quadra at That Place Revealed.

The Dominion steamer Quadra returned to port yesterday evening, after being absent on various and important duties for the last fortnight. The proposed site for the new beacons on the edge of the dangerous shoal that extends out into the Gulf of Georgia from the north of the Fraser River has been marked by two small buoys; the beacon will be erected as soon as possible. The rock on which the Romulus struck on the 30th of last March, when in charge of Pilot Sabiston, has been found and located; the rock is in the fairway of what was shown by the Admiralty chart as a good and safe passage. The rock bears from Black Rock south 35 degrees east, distant three cables, and 22 feet of water was found upon it when reduced to low water spring tides, though less depth than this may probably be found on some of the rocky heads. The tide sets over the rock with great velocity, causing a strong ripple and overflow on the surface. Besides this as well as other dangers, the Quadra, Capt. Walbran, who examined the pass right through. One of these dangers, on which is 10 feet at extreme low water, lies just south of Virago Rock, of which it is an extension, a rocky ledge on which is four fathoms connecting it with the rock, and several fathoms on each side of the ledge. The other danger is the extension of the reef south of Canoe Rock, which extends to the southward from that small islet further than is marked on the chart. At Entrance Island the new beacons for alarm has been landed, all ready to be erected, when it will be a valuable addition to the safe navigation of the port of Nanaimo. At Active Pass the new steam fog alarm was adjusted by Chief Engineer Grant, and it is now ready for service. The blast is 10 seconds duration, with an interval of one minute between each blast. Three Fraser river buoys were picked up in various localities, two at Vancouver and one up Howe Sound. These buoys have been returned to the Fraser river and will be replaced by the Samson. The strong freshets now coming down the river, accompanied by all kinds of floating debris is the cause of the buoys not staying in their proper positions. The Quadra has returned to port in excellent order, reflecting great credit on all aboard.

COSTLY FISHING RODS.

Exquisite and Expensive Outfits of Anglers of Affluence.

Tackle made nowadays for trout fishing is a dream of exquisite beauty, and the anglers of but 20 years ago look with dumb amazement at the decorated relics in use at that time. The farmer's boy, catching trout by the score with a clumsy bean pole, while the fishless sportsman with finest tackle gazes in mute admiration, wondering how it is done, is a familiar scene. The newspapers have printed it incessantly, the illustrated journals have added their mite, until it has become a happy household story. It was a funny legend, and lingered a good while. To-day the anglers of the world are no longer content with the use of the one who succeeds in luring the lusty trout from its secluded retreats. Thaddeus Norris, that estimable leader of the gentle Quaker anglers, in his various outings on the famous Broadhead, Pennsylvania, made use of a fly casting rod twelve ounces in weight, where to-day a rod of five ounces in weight is accepted as the extreme limit, the more popular, squatty, effective and less irksome tool weighing but four ounces. He would doubtless have made a lighter weapon, for he built his own tools, had he been acquainted with the Japanese bamboo, cementing its sections and whipping them with silk, coating them with water proof solution, and giving as a result a fishing rod so strong, so pliable, so delicate in action, and so enduring as to prove not only perfection in use and a thing of rare beauty to the eye, but to reach a weight measured by fractions instead of ounces. The split bamboo fishing rod is one of the triumphs of modern skill and ingenuity and is closely pressed by the silken, enameled and waterproof lines made in this country alone. The same may well be said of rods, the most important adjunct in the gentle art of angling. The finest material, the greatest skill, the most experienced labor and the most perfect machinery are utilized in the creation of the modern angler's outfit, and as the result is limited, it is a natural sequence that these articles are costly. A good hexagonal bamboo fly-rod, the best and most satisfactory pattern yet produced, costs from $25 to $40, and with ordinary care will serve faithfully for many years. Fly-rods costing $400 are not in general demand, yet they are on sale at this moment in the show room of a Broadway tackle house, and are superb samples of the high state of perfection reached in their manufacture and of the exquisite manner in which gold filigree can be fitted to the butt or handle of these implements. Reels of good quality are made of silver, aluminum, brass, rubber and nickel, and even gold has recently entered into their construction. One of the latter being now in the possession of a Maiden Lane angler. It is built upon the quadruple multiplying principle of the splendid Frankfort (Ky.) reel, is richly engraved, jeweled like the works of a fine watch, and costs $500. The $200 reel, however, is more popular at present, even among the most accomplished anglers, and is quite as reliable and serviceable, for it will run smoothly until the owner lays it aside forever.—New York Evening Post.

The Victoria Disaster.

London, June 29.—A despatch from Beyrout says: The Camperdown and Victoria were locked eight minutes. Two minutes after they were unlocked the entire facade of the rear side of the quadrangle above showing as quaint and dreamlike a scene of resplendence and antiquity as can be found in Europe. Through this is reached the stable-yard, now restricted to accommodation for 80 horses. In olden time it could care for hundreds of animals, as folk of quality in the time of the King Edward pilgrimages invariably came on horseback. Everything about the New Inn is queer and quaint and old. Never elsewhere was

SCENES OF SLUMBEROUS TRANQUILITY

The Spot Where "Nicholas Nickleby" Was Imagined—Well Preserved Roman Remains—Where William and Malcolm Strove for Supremacy.

London, June 19, 1893.—There is no place in England where such a fine example of the very ancient stone-built village may be found as at Broadway, the "Bradwell" of 500 years ago, which nestles against the lower slope of the northwestern face of the Cotswold Hills, overlooking the lovely vale of Evesham. The many-gabled large charming and curious resort for American and English artists and other genuine epicures of food, scenery and charming antiquities, is the most ancient of all the structures of the slumberous old mountain town.

The precise structure standing here today is known to have been occupied as an inn for upwards of 500 years. It is a charmingly picturesque without, and its interior is most quaintly arranged, with odd nooks and corners, while the first floor of the east wing has a fine old room with a curiously carved chimney-piece in stone, other interesting ornamentation, and a wonderful increase of revenue to the place by the most interesting sights of the place by all foreign travelers. One of these, the New Inn, is an extraordinary relic of very ancient times and is a fine example of the old English style, its historical associations and its extremely picturesque character, its architecture having many features in common with the larger and distinctly Moresque inns of Spain and Portugal.

Readers of history will recall that the splendid south aisle of Gloucester's magnificent cathedral was built in 1318 by Abbott Thoke, during whose abbacy the body of the murdered King Edward II., which had been refused burial in the abbey of Malmesbury, Kingswood and Bristol, was given burial within it. Great pilgrimages to Edward's tomb, and wonderfully increased the revenue to the then abbey church resulted. The throngs were sometimes so enormous that the city could not shelter them, and they were obliged to encamp at night outside the gates. A shrewd old monk, named John Turnish, taking proper advantage of the situation, had the abbey and with the sanction and assistance of the famous abbott, Thomas Seabrook, built the New Inn, which at the time doubtless had no superior as a public hostelry in Europe. Think of taking your ease in your inn as you can in the New Inn of Gloucester to-day, in a tavern which has survived the changes of 443 years and never been closed a day!

The quaint old place is so cunningly hidden behind the grim walls of Northgate street that the casual stranger, not having in his mind the idea of a place so fortunate indeed if his glance penetrated the deep, dark archway separating it from the street and fell upon the charming old world scene within.
