What You Can Get Here To-morrow

In spite of the alliance that exists between England and Japan, Bt. Hon. Andrew Flaher, until a few days age premier of the sommonwealth of Australia, declares himself emphatically for Japanese cardusion. He is considered to voice the views of the considered to voice the views of the people of Australia and New Zealand.

"The newer countries," says Mr. Flaher, "those with many natural resources still undeveloped, are considered fair fields for exploitation in these days of migration and emigration and it is time that the lawmakers of such countries guard the eternal well being of their own peoples, regulate severely the incomings and doings of the alien who would reap a harvest at the expense of or at least in unfair competition with the legitimate heir to the soil and its products. I am unwilling to insult the patriotism and intelligence of Australians by even intimating that the Nipponese are welcome to our shores.

Mayor Edward Leigh Had Roughed ft in Major Edward Leigh, formerly of the D. ario Crown Lands Department, who died last month, was a man of unique personality. Throughout his early life, Major Leigh was essentially a "rolling stone," and his travels carried him to many sorners of the globe. Eventually, wenty-three years ago he became possessor of a grant of land near Lakeville, Ont., where he farmed for some time, losing, as he was wont to say with his sustomary chuckle, "on an average four hundred dollars a year," a a"ing, however, "but I had all the spo. wanted, so it was worth it." Sport was his hoby, and the many trophies with which his house is adorned speak for his prowess with gin and rifle. Only a few months ago he was able to boast proudly that he could walk down most of the young men of to-day, and during part of last summer he was camping with his wife in Muskoka.

On one occasion when in the Australian gold-fields he had run out of money, but received from England, just as he was at his wif's en. to know where to turn, a draft for £1,000. Drafts are not of much practical use in such districts as he was in, and having no means of reaching the outer world except on foot, he started forth to walk to Melbourne, a

It was entered into inadvisedly, at least on England's part, for its working out must have made England take sides with Japan as against some of the white inations, Russia, Germany, France or Portugal, over eastern affairs.

"I do not regard the Japanese as a desirable people to have in large numbers in a white man's country. Even with the franchise — which they will never obtain in Australia—they would form elements separate and distinct from the rest of the community.

"A few years ago it was believed by most people that the vast sections of land in the new countries would never be taken up for settlement. Yet land is almost at a premium to-day and the time is probably not far distant when the last portions of the public domain will be thrown open to the people.

The actual signboard of John Calcraft, the famous public executioner, who during his long term of office carried out the extreme penalty of the law on many notorious murderers, has just been placed on view in Mme. Tussaud's Exhibition. The board used to be outside Calcraft's shop. It is framed, and has crudely painted upon it, in large block letters, the following extraordinary inseription: "J. Calcraft, Boot and Shoe Maker. Executioner to Her Majesty." Surmounting the frame is the Royal Coat-of-Arms. John Calcraft, who was born in 1800 and died in 1879, was executioner in London from 1828 until 1871.—Evening Standard.

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more remantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passage—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly cavred. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Any weakness in your back? Sometimes you experience pain and weakness without much suffering. Later on the pain will surely come. The trouble can be stopped now by rubbing on Nervillae—rub it in deeply over the spine, and then pat the Nervillae Beauty over the spine, and then put on a Nerviline Porous Plaster. In these remedies you will find wonderful and quick relief. They will spare you from an attack of Lumbago, which is the outcome of neglected pain in the back or side. For all muscular pains, strains, and weakness, Poison's Nerviline and Nerviline Plasters have no equal. Refuse substitutes.

A Tip for Canada.

A feature of striking significance in this forestry congress at Paris, international in representation and international in its scope, was that this congress was conceived, organized and brought to a successful fruition by the Touring Club of France, a body having no direct interest in the promotion of forestry. This club, composed of some of the most influential men in France, residued the aesthetic value of the forest to the nation, a point which is almost entirely overlooked in Canada at present. If in Canada, as in Europe, our rallways and national highways were bordered by beautiful tracts of forest land instead of the bare, barren fire-swept wastes so prevalent at present, the money value of such an influence on the mind of the tourists would not be the least advantage to be derived from such forests. Nuns Renew Vows.

Has Wonderful Memory.

J. S. Dennis, assistant to the general manager of the C.P.R., is reputed to have the best memory of anyone on the road. One of the company's surveyors said onee, "Gee, you can't slip anything over on the chief. If you begin to talk to him about a quarter section, he'll says, 'Yes, I remember. It is slightly alkaline toward the southerly half, but the north part is excellent land!' What do you know about that, in a three million acre tract?'' His memory for the slightest detail is just as perfect, and there is nothing in the multitude of things connected with his great work on which he cannot give you dates and figures.

With all his gravity and dignity, there is nothing Mr. Dennis so much enjeys as a practical joke. He has boxes of "magic" stored away and will "spring" conundrums, puzzles, "magic coins," and tricks of all sorts boxes of "magic" stored away and will "spring" coundrums, puzzles, "magic coins," and tricks of all sorts on you without notice. I remember being a guest on board is private car once for dinner, and is I raised my glass I was much abashed to perceive a trickle of water running down my frock. I hastily wiped it away and next time I raised the glass very gingerly, but again I received a bath. The slightest suspicion of a twinkle in Mr. Dennis' eye made me examine the glass. It was perforated so that it spilled whenever it was raised. He shouted with laughter when his trick was discovered.

Ways in Which They Can Avoid the Consequences.

A few weeks and a case came into a British court in which a Poor Law officer was charged, with having wrongfully forced a sale affithe effects of a certain lady who had been unable to pay the Poor rate. The verdict went against the officer, who was held to have acted entirely beyond his legal rights.

Cases like this are by no means undermond, though the lilling debtor rarely seeks redress in the siril courts. Many are of the opinion distrible laws of debt are sometimes unfair to the creditor. This is a question date the leadered to the red to the creditor. This is a question date an only be settled by our legislators.

On the other hand, there can he adduct that the law is very extensively abused by a class of creditors who trade on their victims in operation of the law to perform acts which would promptly be panalized by any index.

The shiet offenders in this respect are probably the less reputable of those firms who supply goods on the casy payment system. As is well known, when purchasing goods in this way it clause is usually inserted in the agreement stipulating for the return of the goods in the event of non-payment of the importance, and the forfeiture of the money already paid.

Now, if, through temporary misfertune, under British law, you are duable to keep up your payments to date an honest firm will invariably comed to keep up your payments to date an honest firm will invariably comed to keep up your payments to date an honest firm will invariably comed to keep up your payments to date an honest firm will invariably comed to keep up your payments to date an honest firm will invariably comed to keep up your payments to date an honest firm will invariably comed to seek the goods at once.

This forcible seisure is entirely illegal.

All you need do when the company, agents call for the goods is simply, for the subsching outside, nor the entertune of the subsching outside, nor the

You need not be frightened of the panisohnicon awiting outside, nor the bluffing of the agent, who knows that he dare not force an entry.

If he were to "break outer doors and enter"—and "breaking" here means no more than turning a door handle—he would be guilty of the crime of house-breaking.
