Admits That Consulates Are Now Used for Shelving Wornout Politicians-

There Must Be a Reform.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19 .- Secretary of State Root, while appearing before the house appropriations committee in relation to the expenses of the state department spoke frankly concerning the shortcoming of the Americ an consular state service. The statements of Mr. Root, which have just been made public, show that in response to questions by Representative Living-ston, the secretary said:

"There are a great many consulated morning. It is understood in minister-that have been in that condition, and morning. It is understood in minister-there are some that are still in that ial circles, but the fact has not yet been officially given out that Premier Rou-"There are a great many consulates condition, and the fact arises from sev-eral causes. One cause is that consulates are used and regarded here not as places in which active and sufficient work is to be done, but as places in which to shelve estimable and elderly gentlemen whose friends find it necessary to take care of them in some way. ow I have got old enough to be able to say that sort of thing without anybody being offended. I do not think that when a man has lived out the activity of his life and passed beyond his ambition and his energy and his desire to make a career for himself, I do not think that then is the time to start him out in a new place where he has got to learn a new business and push the commerce of the country.'
