Pocket the Profits

The investigations of the Royal Commission into the conduct of insurance business in Canada two years ago laid bare one of the boldest schemes ever devised by a pair of speculators for enriching themselves at the expense of other people and at the risk of other people's money.

This plot becomes of paramount public interest and of tremendous public significance from the fact that the plotters were leading members and ex-members of the Parliament of Canada, men some of whom would be called to Cabinet positions if their party were returned to power, and one of whom would be put in charge of the public money as Minister of Finance. The manner in which they handled the funds of other people which came into their possession must be taken therefore as indicating how they would handle the money of the people of Canada if they were permitted to gain possession of it.

The scheme of these gentlemen was nothing else than to take the money of the Independent Order of Foresters, speculate with it in all manner of risky ventures, and pocket the profits. From the speculator's view-point, it was a splendid game. If the speculation succeeded, he was the winner; if it failed, the Foresters were the losers.

This money came from the premiums paid into the order by the members on their insurance policies. It was held as a "trust" fund, from which the insurance policies had to be paid as members died. It belonged to the Foresters. Upon it they were dependent if the husband and father were taken away. If it were lost, they must suffer. It had been paid in for them. It was held in trust for them. It belonged absolutely to them. Not one bit had any right, title or claim to it in any manner or form. No one had any right to use it but for their benefit. Any interest it earned belonged to them, and any of its earnings which were taken by anyone else was so much money taken from them.

Is Your Chest "Wheezy?"

Tightness and wheezing means your trouble is deep seated. To delay is dangerous. Inflammation must be drawn out at once. Rub the throat with chest with Nerline, and put on a Nerline Porous Plaster. Relief comes in an hour. The counterirritant effect of the plaster relieves the tightness and strain, draws out the soreness, eases the pain. The penetrating qualities of Nerline enable it to soak to the very core of the trouble, and you experience a feeling of warmth and relief. The danger is past. For weak chest, "hoarseness" and tendency to colds, the treatment beats all others.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—cough from a simple cold—cough that keeps you awake, and you use the finished product, don't blindly suggest it with a remedy. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take rough mixtures or preparations containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons, and now—well, now—Coughs says "Put it on the label, if you see to your Cough Remedy." Good! Very good! Hereafter for this very reason, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's label—and none in the medicine, who it must be law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those who know. Look at a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Amazing Audacity of Mr. Borden

The general election will long be remembered for the display of amazing audacity on the part of a mill man, Mr. Borden's appeal is that the Liberals of Canada shall make him Prime Minister. He has presented no issue on which to try conclusions with the Government. He has no record of service at the comparable with that of his great opponent. He is dumb in the presence of the great record of accomplishments for Canada in the twelve years of Laurier.

So he says to the Liberals of Canada, with the coolest kind of assurance. You have been in power long enough. I'm not such a bad fellow, after all. I stand pretty much where you stood fifteen years ago. Why not turn Laurier out and put me in?"

That is really what it comes to, and the audacity of it is quite engaging. But as to the effectiveness of it there may well be room for doubt.

Does he really think for example, that Liberals who voted for Alexander Mackenzie, who admired his sterling integrity, who respected his honest mind, are to be deceived by a few honest words into forgetting what treatment was meted out to Alexander Mackenzie by the self-same people, some of them, who crowd around Mr. Borden on the platform?

Does he really expect those who carried on the long struggle against Sir John Macdonald to abandon the man who led them to victory?

Does he really think that by saying so, he can get people to believe the platform of 1893 has been absent from the thoughts of the Liberal leaders, and that it is to him we must look, and to his party, for the vindication of Liberal doctrines.

Can he, with his hand on his heart, and with the rest of Colchester tomatoes who crowd around Mr. Borden on the platform, believe that he is the true spokesman of their ideals about electoral purity?

Can he, with the man at his side whom Dr. Beattie Nesbitt described as "Rockefeller's Boy," think himself acceptable as the Liberal's pattern of resistance to monopoly?

Can he with Foster and Fowler and Pope, and others in his near entourage, hope to be taken as a Galahad of politics?

Can he with the general rejoinders of his intimate relation to the Zandran-Zandran-Zandran plain of telegraphing money in lots of two, three four and five thousand dollars daily to safe partisans on the eve of elections, really dream that his claim to be considered a moral reformer will go down with the life-long opponents?

Can he hope for credit when he talks of Civil Service Reform from the same platform as Sir James Whitney, whose application of the spoils system has been the disgrace of his brief administration?

Does he bring men from the cabinet of British Columbia to preach respect for the public domain, from British Columbia where a judge said in open court that a public man, now dead, ought to have his knightly decorations torn from him for things he did the cabinet with members of the same Cabinet?

Does he bring Mr. Roblin with him to preach virtue in respect of the public domain, Mr. Roblin whose friends are getting rich out of land deals to which he helps them?

Or does he bring Mr. Roblin to argue for fairness in elections, he who would let none but his own partisan appointees touch the voters' list or do other than he wanted done with it until Parliament stood over him with a club and forced him to let the judges hear and deal with his opponents' complaints of ill treatment?

It is much to Mr. Borden's credit, and speaks volumes for the quality of his nerve, that he can, in face of all these disqualifications, claim for his own the support of the Liberals of Canada, and that at the very time tens of thousands of people of all politics and no politics, are showing by their greetings that there is only one public man in whom they have a keen interest, and that one man the leader who has three times led Liberals to victory, and will win with them a fourth.—Montreal Herald.

Knitting as a Nerve Cure

It is told of Robert Louis Stevenson that one of the many things he learned to do to keep himself amused when he was restless or ill was to knit. There are many men of a generation much older than ours who improve odd moments by working with yarn and needles. But women, to be women, simply must knit after their hair is gray, and it is good for them. "My prescription, madam, is that you knit two hours daily," said the physician. "Knit!" exclaimed the nervous patient. "Why on earth should I knit?" The doctor replied: "Because nothing is more soothing to the nerves; because nothing conduces to such a calm and cheerful frame of mind. I could prescribe valerian for you, but knitting will better it will do you much more good. I believe that a month of it will cure you."
