Two sizes are manufactured: a large one, calculated for power; and a smaller, designed for the hand. They are entirely different from any Corn Sheller heretolore known, and being contracted with great simplicity and durability, are not liable to get out of repair—in important consideration.

The large machine, driven with power, is capable of shelling, in a superior manner, 500 bushels in a day, acting on twelve engs at once. It is only necessary to keep the 160 per supplied, but of no consequence how promiscionals with the consequence how promiscionals with a serior and in case the corn is deposited in an upper 10ft, and the sheller on a lower floor, with a feeding trough of proper dimensions, it night run for hours without any attention. The machine is compact, occupies but small space, and requires but little power.
