The Location is the Finest in St. John. The Suburban, retaining the best of the scenery, and the view of the harbor, is unrivalled. The house is situated on a high and airy position, and is well adapted for a residence, or for a place of resort.

It is a beautiful and spacious house, and is well adapted for a residence, or for a place of resort.

For a whole year, in traversing these rocky streets, one heard on every side, "A lovely day," "Charming weather!" "Uncommonly warm!" "Very fine!" Well, I agreed to all, but in my ignorance, hardly too, in all the meaning; it seemed to me an strange but warm when I had to wear a thick, coarse, woolen shirt in the middle of July. But in one of my daily excursions I chanced upon a silk umbrella—a silk umbrella!

Well, it is a luxury to have an umbrella! You may wear out your gloves, wear out your shoes, but don't let your umbrella! It is a luxury to have an umbrella! You may wear out your gloves, wear out your shoes, but don't let your umbrella! It is a luxury to have an umbrella!

A Boston Schoolman's Spends Her Vacation in St. John: She Sees the Sights, Buys an Umbrella and is Introduced to the Fog.

(From the Boston Commonwealth.)

I am sure a sojourn in this famous region (St. John, N. B.) would repay any effort made to get here. In a former article I noticed at length the trip and the pleasures thereof, and to a certain degree trips are alike—a moving panorama of beautiful things, changes of landscape, of hills and valleys, of river and stream; but allow me to tell you, dear friend, that it does make a difference in what part of our little world you undertake to view this panorama and once there, your inquiries are in this direction and you will be willing to take your oath that your sense is satisfied.

Well, then, here are our feet planted firmly on the soil of St. John, and we begin to look about us for an abiding place—and here is the first funny thing. The "Victoria," with its square, massive walls and its gracefully curtained windows, looms up before us, surmounted by the English flag, and, beside it, in close proximity, the "Queen" and "Empress," having one by its very look to get and enjoy. But ways and means not being equal to this, we must look further, and lo! every house, as it were, boasting of four rooms, puts out a pretentious sign, "Hotel and—"

House meet one at every corner, and three or four between corners! Really, you need not suffer for public attention and care—albeit there may be a choice. Supper, then, in a private family, straggled peacefully, which is my happy fortune, and you have your freedom to see and hear and enjoy.

The time of year is just the best, the trees are looking their greenest, the skies their bluest, and of the air and the temperature we have all we could desire. A chance to read a homily on the vanity of the female heart in general and of a few of the specimens in particular. No need of custom-house officers to search trunks to disclose hidden treasures; only look into the contents of the trunk, and you will see what you shall see. Here are dainty robes, bewitching to the eye, and destined to be worn by a private family, straggled peacefully, which is my happy fortune, and you have your freedom to see and hear and enjoy.
