CONSECRATION OF THE MOUNT ROYAL CEMETERY. "THE EXAMINER" ON VOLUNTARYISM.

As might be expected, the Examiner is not satisfied that the dismal list of ministers of various denominations who have been compelled in one insignificant city alone in the neighbouring republic, to devote their exclusive attention to secular pursuits in order to obtain a livelihood, is of the slightest value as evidence that the voluntary principle is not adapted to meet the religious exigencies of a country. Indeed, under the influence of the fixed idea which over-rules all things else in his mind, and to which a contemporary gives the name of "Ecclesia-phoby," the editor actually imagines that the cases we mentioned "prove the salutary and efficient operation" of voluntaryism. He does not condescend to inform us how, or in what way, this operation is accomplished, and we confess our imagination is not sufficiently comprehensive to grasp it; it eludes us altogether. We cannot ascertain why he should consider it a triumph, that nine ministers in Cleveland alone, have been transformed by the voluntary principle into boarding-house keepers, farmers, bonnet sellers and rail-road station keep-

But, passing from this subject, he calls our "special attention" to " a fact," which he asserts "affords a kind of crowning evidence to the triumphs of voluntaryism in the American Union."

This is the great "fact" thus heralded "During the last fifty years, says a writer on religious statistics, the number of members in the evangelical churches in the United States has increased from four hundred thousand to eight-fold, while the population has increased only four-fold." Strange as it may appear to the Editor of the Examiner, this statement, in our opinion, militates most forcibly against his own hallucinations. Indeed, it is long since we have seen a more destructive blow aimed at the voluntary theory. The writer estimates the number of members of ing words:—

Mr. JUSTICE McCord,—It having been an the "evangelical churches" at three millions and a half, which we presume includes the American Church as well as gious services, and recorded episcopal acts, I the various denominations. Sixteen millions of no belief, in a land which, as the Examiner is wont to say, " is uncursed and unshackled by the withering olighting influences of endowments," and where voluntaryism had such a splendid

Our contemporary is unfortunate in his arguments, and it is a great pity he should waste time and paper in endeavouring to sustain a principle which cannot endure the test of experience. The statements of the eloquent Dr. Chalmers, that those who most require the ministrations of religion are the least disposed to pay for them, has never yet been refuted. The editor of the Examiner may have

> The complete stone Font is not yet frequently found in the country churches of this Province; and it is particularly gratifying to see the want in this instance supplied by the spontaneous good thought and exertions of members of the congregation, who, when revisiting the long established and well furnished churches of their native country, were prompted, perhaps, by the contrast to endeavor to supply something of what was lacking in the church of their Canadian home. The gift in this case assumes the character of a thank-offering to that gracious Providence who has conducted them in safety through the perils of two voyages back to the home of their

The circumstances connected with the presentation of the Font were briefly detailed to the congregation by the Rector, the Rev. H. C. Cooper, before the close of the service on Trinity Sunday.

The favorable reception given by the public to "Roughing it in the Bush," has Mission—Bishop Kip, Reception of our Mission induced Mrs. Moodie to issue a sort of children, Mining District of East Tennessee, preface to it under the name of "Flora Lyndsay," in which, under the thin veil of assumed names she describes the circum- Societies, Africa, Journal of the Rev. We do not imagine that it will obtain anything like the popularity of the work which succeeds it in point of time though preceding it from the press. There is a life-like reality and vividness in the Bush scenes which showed that they were stamped indelibly in the writer's mind, and that without labour they were indited currente calamo. The present book, however, seems to us as if it were written with effort,-as if the authoress was bound to make a book and did not altogether find it an easy task to procure proper material for it. Hence there are a variety of characters introduced, who have no connection whatever with the story, and who are seemingly brought per Rev. E. Grasett forward for the mere purpose of making St. John's Church, Presthe story, and who are seemingly brought up a chapter. Amongst these dummies is a Miss Wilhelminia Carr, who, though figuring on the scene some twenty years since, bears a very close resemblance in some of the "strong-minded" dames who have of late been astonishing sober-minded wise, an excessively mean and stingy naval officer occupies a large space, while tale written at sea by Mrs. Lyndsay,- Newton Flora herself-during the intervals of seasickness and nursing the baby, occupies no less than seventeen chapters. If such chartist nonsense was introduced by the publishers, they deserve the severest censure; but if written by Mrs. Moodie, it will only be attributed either to culpable ignorance, or to a desire to flavor her book with sentiments likely to propitiate her democratic readers " across the lines."

instant, that an affair took place on board the steamer Quebec on her upward passage the pre-vious morning, which shows the feeling enterained towards the Hon. Judge Mondelet, the libeller of the Queen, by a number of Her Ma-jesty's subjects in "this Canada." According to information, when the passengers, among whom was Judge Mondelet, had assembled at the breakfast table, a gentleman, a merchant of Montreal, rose and stated that as there was one person there who, in his official position on the bench, had made use of language towards Her Most Gracious Majesty and the armies of England and France, now engaged in chastising one of the most brutal tyrants of the age-language which unfitted that man for the company of gentlemen, he considered it his duty as a gentlemen and a loyal subject to withdraw; and he trusted that all who coincided with him would follow his example. After the gentleman had done speaking those at the table rose, and after giving three deafening cheers for the Queen, left it in sole possession of His Honor. A more unmistakeable expression of public opinion it would be hard to conceive .-

THE FISHERY NEGOTIATION .- The New Brunswicker gives the following particulars with regard to proceedings in Newfoundland:-

With reference to the negotiations, some important proceedings have recently taken place in the legislature of Newfoundland. On the 13th of May, the Governor of that colony informed the Assembly by message that a meeting of Colonial delegates was contemplated, to discuss the terms of a treaty relative to reciprocity and the fisheries; and that he conceived certain special stipulations should be made on behalf of Newfoundland. First, that existing duties on American articles should be retained, until the colony could make other arrangements for raising a revenue. Second, that the American fishing bounties should be abolished; and third, that there should be a reservation of the right of making Legislative enactments for the preservation of bait, and for a prohibition of it exportation during six weeks in each season. The Governor then invited the House to express its opinion on the expediency of instructing the officer of government whom he should send to the convention to insist on these stipulations. The House dealt in a very summary manner with this message by passing a number of resolutions, in substance as follows;—That a free interchange of the produce of Newfoundland and the United States would be mutually advantageous; that if the United States would remove the duties or sile and fich beginning. remove the duties on oil, cod-fish, herrings, seal-skins, salmon, pickled and dried fish, that then the United States bread, flour, pork, but ter, corn and meal should be admitted duty free in Newfoundland. If this arrangement should not be agreed to, that then a duty of six per cent. should be levied on the several articles named, on importation into either country res-On either of these arrangement pectively. On either of these arrangements being made, American fishermen to be admitted to a full and free participation in the fisheries of Newfoundland, as the same are now or may hereafter be enjoyed by British subjects, the United States government abolishing all bounties to their fishermen. The House then resolved that a member of their own body should be delegated to attend the convention, to repre sent the opinions and protect the interests of the colony. It thus appears that Newfoundland is prepared to throw open its fisheries on terms since by Prince Edward's Island.

It appears that the deceased was in the employment of a farmer in Scarboro', and that he occasionally betrayed symptoms of aberration of mind. On Sunday ast he obtained a razor, but there was no indi cation in his conduct which could have led to the belief that he meditated self-destruction. He was found next morning in bed with a deep gash in his throat. He was conveyed to the Hospital, where he expired yesterday morning at eight o'clock.—Globe.

The Directors announce that a contract has been made to construct a line to Port Sarnia, and notice has been given of an application to be made to Parliament to form a branch to Malden of about 28 miles, and another to Brantford of 7 miles. They close their Report by stating that the investment of capital in the road will prove very remunerative. A sum of $20,000 was voted to Sir Allan MacNab for his services to the Company, and a resolution was passed highly honorable to Mr. Brydges, its Manager.—Toronto Examiner.

The Montreal Gazette understands that on Thursday evening last, as the train was running into the Lachine Railway depot, two persons who were travelling there upon the track failed o get out of the way, and were run down, one of them having his limbs horribly mutilated, and the other being severely bruised. A man named Taylor died in the Montreal

General Hospital on Wednesday night, from injuries he received in the vicinity of Victoria Bridge, Point St. Charles, on Saturday last. Taylor was engaged on the works of the Grand Trunk Railway, and fell under some railway cars drawn by horses, and filled with stones. The Kingston papers of June 17th, says that a fire broke out on Strange's wharf in that city on Friday night last. It soon extended to the large frame building at the extreme end of the wharf, and in which was a large quantity of merchanidize, all of which, with the store itself, was completely destroyed. The large frame store at the entrance to the wharf, in which was a number of stoves and a quantity of stove furniture, was also burnt, whence the fire communicated to the adjoining stores of Mr. Hugh Fraser, burning down his old store-house and FATAL ACCIDENT .- On Thursday last as the Train going to Windsor was East of Chatham, the Conductor, Mr. Worthington, met with his death in a singular manner. As far as we have been able to ascertain the facts, no one appears to have seen the accident, but it is supposed that he was seen the accident, but it is supposed that he was leaning over the side of the platform, and standing on the lower step,—as he had left the inside of the car a minute or two previous in consequence of his nose bleeding,—and that not keeping a look out, his head came in contract with one of the cattle guards, causing instant death. The train had gone 2 or 3 miles before the body was discovered being outside on the platform. was discovered lying outside on the platform.

MELANCHOLY DEATH .- James Lighton, a hand on the steam dredge used in deepening the harbor at Port Stanley, was struck by some part of the machinery, while attending to his usual duties on Monday last, and thrown into the stream. Whether disabled or not, before falling into the stream, is not known, but the unfortunate man sunk, and, when the body was recovered, life was extinct .- Mid. Prototppe.

Thomas Best:—"During my long acquaintance with him, however, he has maintained consistently the character of a faithful disciple of the meek and lowly Jesus. But of late years his deepening humility—his still expanding benevolence—his readiness for every service of Christian love to which he was competent, will have impressed the minds of those who enjoyed the advantage of frequent or familiar intercourse with him. There was in him a perhaps constitutional fearfulness in respect of the closing with him. There was in him a perhaps constitutional fearfulness in respect of the closing scene of life. The prospect of this trial always appeared to be an almost painful thought to him. His heavenly Father, however, who doeth all things well, spared him all the suffering which he might have feared. He dealt very graciously with this timid and tender spirit.
