MISS FLOY V. GILMORE.

A Bright Indiana Girl Who Has Marked Legal Ability.

The career of Miss Floy V. Gilmore hows how a woman who is determined to succeed can accomplish her aim and win a place and a name for erself even though she invades the fields of labor that are supposed to be alents of man.

Miss Gilmore is the assistant attorney general for the government of the United States in the Philippine Islands, and she is the first woman ever appointed to such an important posi-tion. Miss Gilmore is the daughter of A. M. Gilmore of Elwood, Ind., and is twenty-four years old. She was gradmated from the University of Michigan and was admitted to practice at the Indiana bar a few years ago.

Miss Gilmore owes her distinction entirely to her ability and ambition. She was clerk and secretary to E. Finley Johnson when he was professor of law at the University of Michigan. While thus employed she devoted her spare time to the study of law and was eventually rewarded with a diploma. Prossor Johnson was appointed a judge In the Philippines in 1901 when the judiciary was first established there, and Miss Gilmore went with him. took the civil service examination and was appointed a stenographer in the Her marked legal ability attracted

THE PASSING . SIMPLICITY. Rev. Dr. Newell Dynaht Biblis, of Brook-lyn, Makes a Terrible Analyment of the United States Nation.

I want to say that we all go to the devil on $50,000 a year. At least a great many men I know are going to the devil on that sum, and law are escaping it. But how many men ever went to the devil on simplicity? I venture to say none.

the devil on simplicity? I venture to say none.

To-day we are raising pampered sons and daughters in this new system, surrounding them with every luxury and idle satisfaction of desire, and they are rotten before they are ripe. I repeat it, they are rotten before they are ripe. And the boys in many cases are sinful before they are bearded.

Sunday has to a great extent ceased to be a day of worship. Men rise at 10 o'clock, drive until 12, eat a dinner of twelve courses and in the evening hold a reception for their friends. The women and children follow much the same plan.

low much the same plan. Let me tell you that America, this America of ours, is God's last opportunity to save the human race, but if we fail by describing the teachings of our fathers her institutions are lost.—Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis. Hillis.

A SOCIAL PEST.

An Interesting Dissertation Concerning the Overpowering Woman.

Did you ever meet the overpowering woman?" said the woman with a worried look on her face, as she settled in an easy chair for the afternoon's gossip. "She baffles description. No one can tell exactly why she is overwhelming. She is always stylish, but it is not in this that her power lies, for there are myriads of stylish women who have little influence on one. She is always self-possessed, although she has no special reason for being self-confident. She is conceited, but no one knows why. She is always condescending. She ing woman?" said the woman with a is conceited, but no one knows why. She is always condescending. She ever obtrubes her own views, and if you differ from her she raises her eyebrows in a most trying way. She may listen to you, but it is always with an air of patronage. She impresses you with the idea of how much better she could do your work than you are doing it. She flaunts her perfect attire in your face and then says sweetly: 'I have to take such care of this gown. Really, I think it would be much better to have simple and inexpensive clothes like yours; then I need not bother like yours; then I need not bothe ever them.'

over them.'
"If she comes into your home you seem of every little defect in your housekeeping. You are sure she has seen the faded place in the table cover and that she has spied the cobweb over the door. She refrains from making disagreeable re-marks about your home, but you are sure she has seen all its bad points. She manufactures such plausible ex-cuses for any little failure in her own household that you are ashamed because you have no such excuses to offer.

'Your most elaborate preparations

'Your most elaborate preparations

"Your most elaborate preparations for an evening's entertainment seem shabby and cheap under her cold, critical gaze. You are sure everything is going lovely until she appears; then a chill strikes your heart and everything goes away.

"Somehow you never can appear your best before her. Often you find yourself making mistakes in grammar that you never dream of making in congenial society. You find yourself acting awkwardly when you are naturally self-possessed. Your swellest cravat grows insignificant beest cravat grows insignificant beside the neck ribbon she is wearing. Your boots, sensible walking affairs, suddenly grow big and clumsy as she looks at them.

"She seldom says mean things, but she looks them. She does not say, The idea of your wearing a toque," but she says, 'You are going to wear a toque this summer? Oh!' She does not say that she knows how to do most things better than you, but after you have related some little triumph with a touch of pride she tells you how much more gloriously she did a similar deed. She looks at your piece of needlework and even says it is pretty. Then she brings out needlework of her own and points out how exquisitely it is

"You feel that you have no right to complain of this woman. She probably means well and does not intend to hurt your feelings. She may even have a sort of interest in you. But she is a most uncomfortable person to be with. There is no antidote for her, as she is so supremely contented with herself all the time. She would not know a 'call down' when she heard one, she is so supremely sure that she is all right. So the only course left is to avoid her as much as possible, even to running away when you see her coming." complain of this woman

Pitcher Plant's New Use.

The Trinidad Botanical Depart-The Trinidad Botanical Department proposes a unique plan for the extermination of the destructive roaches which prey upon orchids. It recommends the plentiful use of pitcher plants as a sort of floral watch dog. This peculiar flower possesses the property of conturing and killing dog. This peculiar flower possesses the property of capturing and killing insects which venture into its enticing urn shaped blossoms in search of honey dew which may be found there. Cockroaches are particularly susceptible to the blandishment of this Delilah of the flower kingdom, and are an easy prey. They "follow their noses" when they scent the delicate fragrance and creep into the gayly flaunting pitcher of nectar—only to find a tragic end. It is a valley of deadly Upas, for the victim is at once closed in by the sucking petals and his life is literally squeezed out of him. Seldom indeed does one ever escape from the cannibal clutch of him. Seldom indeed does one ever escape from the cannibal clutch of the pitcher plant.
