How the Hotel Clera Could Spot Them

"Do tell us how you can spot them so quickly," said one of the girls who had been standing near the hoel clerk who was relating some of its experiences, taking it all in; then I shaft know what to do and low to conceal my identity as a bride when I come to Quebec sometime—perhaps," she laughed.
"Well, there are ways and ways of ime—perhaps," she laughed.

"Well, there are ways and ways of elling," said the clerk confidingly.
"Some brides always wear new shoes even with their last season's traveling suit; then others have a whole new outfit from top to toe; of course if they have their gloves off, we can tell by a new and shining wedding ing.

ng. ''There was a bride here last week,' "There was a bride here last week," he grinned, "who thought she was going to fool every one; she wore old clothes and carried a battered old traveling bag. Her shoes showed signs of wear, and even her wedding ring was old—probably her mother's. She didn't call her husband 'dearest,' nor give him any languishing looks; she even went off and left him to smoke alone, while she sat on the other side of the room and read a book. She knew how many lumps of sugar he took in his coffee and didn't blush when the English waiter called her 'Miss,' and if the thing hadn't happened nobody would have known but what she had been married five years.

"But after she'd been here two or three days, she came up to the desk one evening and asked if a parcel had not come for her from the furrier's. Said she'd been expecting one since the day before, and they said down there that it had been sent, but it hadn't been sent up to her room, and she thought I must have overlooked it.

"What was the name?' I said, as I "What was the name?' I said, as I went to look over the heap of boxes waiting to be delivered. Mrs. C. C. W., she said. I looked them all over. 'None here, ma'am,' I said. 'There's enly one from the furrier's yeu mention, and that's for Miss Hayward. 'Oh,' she said, 'That's mine!' 'Why, how's that?' I began, when she turned red as a beet and mine! 'Why, how's that?' been married since Thursday, and she snatched the box from me and fairly ran to the elevator, not even waiting for me to ring for a boy to take it up for her.

"Now, wasn't that a nice give-away?" he grinned, delightedly. He went on to give other whys and wherefores, but they shall not be given here for the best of reasons, namely the initiated already know how to tell a bride, and the uninitiated ought to learn by experience, and not from a newspaper.

Why an Indian Paints His Face.

Every paint mark on an Indian's face is a sign with a definite meaning, which other Indians may read. When an Indian puts on his full war paint, he decks himself not only with paint, he decks himself not only with the honors and distinctions won by his own bravery, but also with the special honors of his family or tribe. He may possess one mark of distinction only, or many; in fact, he may be so well off in that respect that, like some English noblemen, he is able to don a new distinction for every occasion. Sometimes he will wear all his honors at one time. Then he is a sight worth traveling far to see.

Then he is a sight worth traveling far to see.

Among the Indian tribes is one designated by the symbol of the dog-fish, painted in red on the face. The various parts of the fish are scattered about on the surface of the face; the long snout is painted on the forehead, the gills are represented by two curved lines below the eyes, while the tail is shown as cut in two, and hanging from either nostril. while the tail is snown as cut in two, and hanging from either nostril. When only one or two parts are painted on a man's face, it is an indication of inferiority; when the whole animal appears, even though in many oddly assorted parts, the signs

Very peculiar are some of the honorable symbols painted on the Indians' faces. There are fish, flesh, and fowl of all kinds—dog, salmon, devilfish, starfish, wood-peckers, eagles, ravens, wolves, bears, sea-lions, and sea monsters, mosquitoes, frogs, mountain goats. frogs, STUDIO

Analysis of Canned Meats.

The analysts of the Marine Department have just completed an analysis of 99 samples of canned meats. Of this number one meat in two samples was quite spoiled, in three others it was slightly spoiled, and the remaining 94 were in good condition. One of the slightly-spoiled samples contained boric acid With this exception all samples containing preservatives were found to be in good condition. The only preservative discovered was boric acid, which was found in 21 samples, representing the products of W. Clark & Company, Montreal; Canadian Packing Co., London; Laing Packing Company, Montreal, and Beardsley & Sons, New York. In no case did the quantity of boric acid found exceed the limit fixed by the British Parliamentary commission, viz., .05 per cent., and in most cases it fell markedly below that amount. The analysts of the Marine De-

Blows out the gas and furnishes the newspapers with a jest and an obituary notice. "Didn't know it was loaded" may be an honest plea, but it never brought a victim back to life. Those who let a cough run on, in ignorance of the danger, find no escape from the consequences when the cough develops into lung trouble.

The best time to kill a snake is in the egg. The best time to cure a cough is when it starts. Ordinarily, a few doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure a cough at the beginning. Bat even when the cough is deep-seated, the lungs bleed and the body is wasted by emaciation, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred effect a perfect and permanent cure.

Marked by the Russian Police Thirty-seven young men belonging to the higher ranks of society in St. Petersburg have erganized an association called the "Club of the Enemies of Flirting." The members exchange solemn caths to refrain from firting and to prevent others from doing so. Those breaking the promise contribute, "for charitable purposes," $500 for the first effense, and $2,500 for the second. According to the bylaws of the society, punishment for the third offense is left to the discretion of the president. The seciety meets in Ernbst's restaurant, en the Kamennostrovski Prespect. Although the charter of the club has been properly registered with the authorities, the police see a revolutionary movement afoot and imagine that if they could discover the key to the char-ter the youthful members of some of St. Petersburg's most noble families would soon find their way to Siberia.

Tanning Done by X Rays.

By a new process it is claimed that leather can be tanned by X rays. The hides will be soaked about four days in lime to expense. lime to separate the fibers and remove the hair, as is now done. Then they will be scaked for about two hours in a solution of certain chemicals, a part of the invention. Then they will be placed on a highly polished steel plate. There for twenty minutes their entire surface will be exposed to the X rays diffused from three tubes. Then the hides will be ready for the finishing into en-amel, patent leather or other desired article. What has always been accomplished in not less than four months by soaking the hides in chemical solutions can, it is claimed, be accomplished in twenty minutes by exposure to the X rays. The cost of tanning will be thereby greatly reduced.

Valuable Carelessness. The late B. F. Jones some thirty years ago was a partner and bookkeeper in a Pittsburg firm that conducted a small forging shop. A few thousand dollars comprised the firm's entire capital. An employee one day in a moment of carelessness while directing the course of a white hot ingot of iron through the rollers allowed his cold half molten metal. The result was a pair of ruined tongs, but the discovery of a process by which a superior grade of steel could be produced. The workman's accident became the basis of the fortune of $50,000,000 of which Mr. Jones died possessed.

Pretty Girl Tells Her Experience

dress was somewhere on Tenth street, not far from the wharfs, and with this sparse information to guide me I had set out to hurry the old washerwoman

"It wasn't a very cheerful job, but I approached it with what enthusiasm I could muster. I was standing downtown at one of the transfer stations waiting for the car to come along that would take me to south Washington when Jack Scorcher came whizzing by in that cute new red devil of his. He saw me and pulled the auto around to where I was standing.

know I've known Jack ever since I wore a pigtail and he knickerbockersand I just guess I did want a ride un-der those peculiar circumstances. But I hated to tell him of the errand on which I was bound. I stepped in along-side of him, though, and he raced his buzz wagon out Massachusetts and Connecticut avenues, explaining its fine points to me in language that I didn't understand in the least. Then I thought what a fine thing that auto would be in which to hunt around for that old washerwoman of ours, and so I just out and told Jack.

"Well, we penetrated the region in south Washington in which mamma had the general idea our washerwoman lived, and Jack tooted his auto horn with all his might in front of a lot of shanties to call the occupants out in order to make inquiries of them as to the location of our washerwoman. At last we got on the trail—an old black man pointed out the house to us a couple of squares down the street. Jack shot his machine down there and pulled up in front of the shanty that had been pointed out to us.

"'You needn't get out,' Jack said to me. 'I'll just toot the old girl out in front.' And he began to pull awful blasts out of his auto horn.
"There was no response for some time, but finally, after three or four minutes, the old mammy, whom I instantly recognized, opened the front door and looked amazedly at me.
