QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

NOTICE TO QUIT.

A rented his farm to B on April 17th, 1906, for a number of years. The lease states that A was liable to sell, and doing so, B was to get six months' notice at any time. He got his notice on October 26th; so it would be up on the 26th April. Can B hold the farm, or has he to go? OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—B is obliged to give up possession, provided A did really sell the farm, and gave the notice accordingly in good faith.

DOG SUCKS EGGS.

A reader asks what to do with a dog that sucks eggs. If the habit is not confirmed, crunching a strongly-flavored, cayenne-peppered egg in his mouth may remove his inclination for raw eggs. Some have recommended boiling, instead of filling with pepper, but we have known dogs to finish hot eggs quite willingly, apparently relishing them boiled as well as raw.

SQUARE OR OCTAGON CEMENT SILOS.

I propose building two cement silos, each 16 feet by 35 feet or 40 feet deep, inside my barn. As the square or octagon silo will fit into the space I have for them better than the round silo, I have almost decided upon the octagon silo. Please inform me, through the columns of "The Farmer's Advocate," if the square or octagon, cement silo, reinforced with iron, will withstand the pressure from inside as well as the round silo, or, at least, be strong enough to stand that immense pressure from inside caused by that weight of ensilage.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—While not equal in strength to the round silo, usage has proved that the square or octagon form, properly constructed, is quite equal to the pressure of ensilage, and, when the corners are rounded off, and the interior smoothly plastered, so as to permit free settling, this form of silo has given very good satisfaction.

NITRATE OF SODA FOR TOMATOES.

I am just starting farming on my own account, and am going to try a little nitrate of soda as top-dressing for tomatoes, sweet corn, sugar beets, cabbage, etc.

Could you tell how best to top-dress tomatoes? I am thinking about mixing the nitrate of soda with the water used for transplanting the tomatoes. If I put, say, 2,000 plants to the acre, I can put 4 pounds of nitrate in about 10 or 12 gallons of water, and use that water at rate of about one pint to every plant, that would take about 100 lbs. nitrate of soda to the acre.

1. Do you think this would be a good plan?
2. Would that mixture be strong enough to injure the plants?
3. Could I use that mixture for any kind of vegetable that I have to transplant, as cabbage, celery, etc.?
4. Do you advise top-dressing sugar beets?

Ans.—One of the difficulties in the use of nitrate of soda is that it is so soluble that it is easily leached out of the soil, or, at least, beyond the reach of the plant. If you apply one pint of the solution, as you suggest, to each plant, I should be afraid that part of the nitrate of soda would at once be carried beyond the reach of the plant. It would, I think, be better to apply the nitrate of soda in two applications. One-half might be put on the surface of the ground near the plant, but not touching, about the time of planting. The balance can be put on two or three weeks later. I think this would give very much better results than if it were applied in solution in the manner indicated. The same would apply with reference to the use of this fertilizer with different kinds of vegetables. I think that a dressing of a small amount of nitrate of soda, say, 50 to 75 pounds to the acre, might be quite effective in the growing of sugar beets.
