THE COURIER.

PRIDAY, APRIL 26, 1850.

The working of the new Judicature Acts has been, in some respects, satisfactory, and, on the whole, the practice of the Courts has improved, rticularly by putting an end to the former dif-y mode of pleading. But, in the Court of actor fleations, the naturage is, if possible ater than before; whether from the defect of the law, or the incompetence of the Court, it is difficult to say. The whole of the week has, so far, with the exception of two or three hours, been occupied by the trial of the most trumpery businamed Rochon, a widower, chose to marry second time, and, according to a very brutal cua-tom, which ought to be put at once and for ever an end to, was subjected to a charteers. His friends, of course, protected him, and a riot ensued, and sundry assaults. A business of this kind might have been settled, and ought to have been so, in a summary way, by any Magistre on the spot, fining or imprisoning the delinquent found, with customary facility, by the Grand (1) Jury, and something like fifty witnesses have Quarter Sessions. One might have thought that this was stupidity enough, but, au comble, the Court has actually occupied itself the whole week up to the date of yesterday evening, with this case, to the infinite prejudice and mischief a other suitors. For four mortal days have two brace of Counsel, learned in the law, and vigorous in the lungs, been laboring hard, each to make un urs, or rather, de plus, fifty orations about every thing and nothing at all. For instance, on Tuesday the Court heard fully argued a question which had been definitively settled for it in the Queen's Bench, whether a Jury could be claimed ex medictate lingue, a matter which did not require one minute to consider, but on which Messis. Loranger and Dumas, "relieved," as military men say, by Messis. Ouimet and Devlin, expended an infinity of eloquence. We know t is the custom of the Canadians to regard much less the verdict than the verbonity of Counsel from whom they expect a labour in speech, rea son or sone, proportionate to the fee; but, really, a Court of Justice ought to check such practices. The garculousness of Counsel must be stopped or there will be an entire failure of the function of law. The physical power of enunciating syllables is nearly unlimited, and usually in inverse proportion to the sense of the speaker. The unsel themselves are not to be blamed. Their clients are usually present, and think, if they do net talk, they do not work. The remedy is it the Judges insisting, and the Bar supporting them in insisting, that no mere irrational talk shall be illowed; that the Bench shall make up its mind on points of practice promptly, and not suffer the indecency of raply on the Court; that the custom of Councel bawling at the top of their voices, and were taking their turn in scolding them, shall be put an end to. It would also be highly Counsel would speak from their places. No man who cannot make himself eard in and from any part of the Court is fit to the face of the Judge, and mobbing and chattering, is destructive of all order. The backs of day. This compilation will, we think, supply and when nobady hears, nobody listens; all order ment of even some of our most approved lexico is lost. The altissime of the acreamers in the ear graphers, and supply a large number of words of the Court, each crowding up as if the Judge and technicalities not to be found in any other was deaf, is drowned in the deep base of the con- similar works. They sak no privilege for themselves which they ing to concede to others; they complain with reason that in some Counties a thou and British electors have a French Canadian re-resentative thrust upon them, with whom, from presentative thrust upon them, with whom, from not speaking the language, they can hold no in-tercourse. They say, let the French Canadian electors have due of their own nation to represent them, but do not tie a thousand British C tors, and thus virtually disfranchise the former. The period has arrived when this fraud mu cease; and the Journal de Quebec renders timely service to the disfranchised British Canadia service to the distranguage printer of the distranguage state of the distranguage of the Ministerial car, and forces them to adopt an enlarged and comprehensive re-construction of the political system.

NED ALLEN; OR, THE PAST AGE. By DAVID HANNAY, Esq. New York : Harper Brothers

Montreal : McCoy. This is a reprint from a recently published English Novel, highly spoken of by the Londo reviewers, and, in a well told and interesting story, conveying what we have no doubt is a faithful picture of Scotfish life some seventy years ago. Among the descriptions which we particularly commend to our residers, is that of the grand Curling match between the Parishes, and the dinner of the Presbytery.

Household Wound. A Weekly Journal. Conducted by CHARLES DICKENS. No. 1.
If this Periodical continue as it has begun, its uccess is certain, for we have met with few works possessing so many qualities for approba-tion. The style and tone of Dickena is conspicuous in many of the articles; the amusing is blended with the useful, and we are sure that, under its unpretending exterior, this little bro-chure will be a welcome weekly visitor at many hearths. Its price is only two pence, and it may be had at McCoy's. At our earliest convenience we shall extract from it a most interesting account of the proceedings of a day at the London Post

To the Editor of This Montheal. April 26, Ther.

The Montheal Countries:

Sing-My letter, in your paper of Monday, the 18th instant, addressed to the Montheal Countries of the Montheal Editor. Addressed to the Montheal of the Montheal Indiana to dispute one of the three, tent the most he now attenties to dispute one of the three, but the most he now attenties to make of it is, that it may possibly be true: it is probable that the Editor does this because my dealed was not told strough. I spatem that my denied of the quotistion, or version, searched to have been made from the Christian Inquirer, to with Christ would not have been the pure character he was, had he lived at the prepent day in Hoston—way not as direct as it might have been. This arose from a wish, on my part, to keep the name, of another goutleman out of the discussion—the equivocation of the Wisness, however, has rendered this impossible.

Scarcely any public writer, but the Editor of the Wisnesh him not seen him no loss for the reason of this. This would not have been the nanwer of a candid tunn, dealing only in Truth; yet, after declining communication with me, he now says, if I will furnish him with a fyle of the Christian Inquirer, he will endeavor to verify his statements. It is to be regested that he had not thought it nelessativy to examine a fyle before he made the statement. Why, in his private note, refuse communication, and after the missing the statement. of courtesy, and with what consistency can he ask any such thing from me, just after declining communication such thing from me, just after declining communication? The original statement in the Witness should have given it is redecease to the number and date of the Christian Inquêre, where such language was to be found. A fair and trothful writer would not have made it without giving his reference, or having it at hand; but in each a case I would not stand on seventum, since my only object is to question. A friend of mine called at the Office of the Winess, and received the name of Mr. W. C. Evans as the Editor's authority. Mr. E, was repeatedly called upon by myself, and a friend, to verify the statement by pointing out the sentence or paragraph in the Inquiri which warranted the assortion of the Witness; if any on pointing out the season of the Winess; if any one which warranted the assartion of the Winess; if any one could find the obnoxious expressions in the Inquirer, surely he who said he saw them could do so. I furnished aim with a complete fyle of the paper as sent to the News-Room of the Mercantile Library Association, in order that he might have full opportunity of drung as; but, on returning the fyle, he ensidily acknowledged in his note to me that he could not discover the paragraph or passage in question—nor is this eff. After the last article appeared in the Winess, I again saw Mr. R., and told him that now I should unavoidably, though very reluctantly, be obliged to bring his name hefore, the public. He requested another examination of the fyle of the paper with the view of verifying the statement—again I fightish-He requested another examination of the type of the paper with the view of verifying the statement—again I furnish-ed him with the fyle, sending my own messenger with it to his residence in Sherbrooke Street, and again, was the ed it, he requested me to write a note asking for it. This struck me as a very singular and unaccountable proceed-ing, seeing that the whole communication with him, by flyself personally, by notes, and by a friend, for fourteen days previously, had been to ask him for it, and to induce him to point it out—singular as the demand was, I wrote him a note to the affect requested. I received a reply. but still it did not contain the long asked for reference to the number of the Inquirer which he requested me so formally to demand, and which had been the object of such patient and anxious search. He left town the same day. I did not wish to make the state of the case public day. I did not wish to make the state of the case puried without affording him another opportunity of privately verifying to me the statement in the Wifness, and thus saving all further trouble, so I wrote another note, and requested an answer immediately on his return to Montireal, as otherwise I, should be compelled to make the own character in this community. As no answer came to my last note, I went in person to Mr. E. so office to ascernain if he had yet returned. I found that he had recommended had been in town some time, and had again left without noticing my note.

Being now satisfied in my own mind, that I have given every private opportunity in my power for verifying the statement of the Winness, having communicated with the statement of the Minness, having communicated with the weather up to, and excepting yeater-in. to their supporters to effect a settlement of this question. Mr. Price had always spoken as if, were he in the Cabinet, this would be the very first question in the Cabinet, this would be the very first question in the world grapple with. Yet, strange to say, this gentleman, with all his sriour and piety, has never once broached the question, in Council though he has been in the Goverfiment more than two years. Whether Mr. Lafontaine's electro-biology has "impressed" him, I cannot say; but this singular change in his conduct must be traceable to some cause. The question having been ignored for two Sessions, the curtain that veiled the mystery is now being withdrawn. The Pricets of Lower Canada govern Mr. Lafontaine; he—the Globe confesses it—" can choose his colleagues for Upper Canada," because he has at his back in nearly one-third of the Assembly; or, in other words, he is practical autocrat, and with the its absistance of the Priesta, the powers of patronage, the great number of dependents and expectants in the Leg-slature, Mr. Lafontaine can govern Canada according to his sovereign will and pleasure.

MONTREAL, April 22, 1866.

To the Editor of The Montreal Course:

Six.—Previous to the removal of the Eigin and Lafontaine Administration from this chy, I do not think I exceed in my supposition, that, including permanent residents, at least 600 persons incurred debts to tradesment which they knew they could not pay, and some never intended to pay, and this year after year. Had a law for arresting salaries been in existence, a very large proportion of the 600 would have been compelled to liquidate all claims; and had the law of imprisonment for debt remained in operation, even the most hardened and unfecting would have been empelled to pay, and there would not have been any necessity for the getting up of the Petition shortly to be placed before the Provincial Partiament.

The fear of an ignominous death has, I doubt not, prevented thousands from taking away the lives of their fellow-creatures, who, had they known for certain that a sail out to the finest climate in the world, a few years sail, and pierhaps subsequent ease and affluence, were all they had to dread, the poison, the knife, or the pistol, would have been brought into play, to gratify malice or research.
