A Word About Stogas

It may be possible during dry weather for a farmer to get along with a pair of laced boots, or a cheap long boot, but for wet fall weather you want a good long boot, one that will wear outside country and extra long legs, for $3 a pair. This season we give you the same boot, only a shorter leg for $2.50. Knowing them to be the best long boots made we contracted for a large quantity of them and have sole control of them. We guarantee every pair. If you want a good boot and want dry feet you will go direct to

MURDER and ARSON

Triple Tragedy and a Horrible Deed of Incendiarism.

Strong Circumstantial Evidence Points to a Son of the Murdered Farmer as the Perpetrator.

The little hamlet of Newbliss is situated about four miles in a northerly direction from Toledo, on the main traveled road leading to Smith's Falls. On a concession road about half a mile west of Newbliss, is the farm of John J. Luckey, ex-Hero, on Saturday last, was enacted a triple tragedy, surpassing in revolting enormity anything ever before committed in this part of Canada.

The following brief account was gathered by a Reporter representative who visited the scene on Monday. The Luckey family consisted of Jas. J. Luckey, his wife (a second marriage), and a daughter of some twenty-five years. On Saturday morning Mr. Luckey drove to Irish Creek and from there to Smith's Falls, while his daughter went across the fields, a distance of half a mile, to her brother's, leaving Mrs. Luckey alone in the house. About one o'clock Mr. Luckey was observed driving in through the gate towards the house, and in less than half an hour thereafter a daughter of Mr. A. Parker, who lives directly on the opposite side of the road, and about forty rods distant, observed a dense column of smoke arising from the house of the Luckeys. She called her father and mother and they all ran over to the place and found the inside of the building enveloped in flames and the doors all fastened. Just previous to this, some men who were thrashing at another farm house in the vicinity heard screams in the direction of the Luckeys, but supposing it was some children at play, paid no attention to it until they saw smoke issuing from the building, when they all ran over, reaching the house about the same time as the Parkers. The eight that met their gaze was one that might well appal the stoutest heart. Just inside the door could be seen the nearly consumed body of Mrs. Luckey, while the body of Mr. Luckey and the girl could be discerned in a like condition in the cellar, having gone down with the burning floor. Every effort was made to drag the bodies from the burning building, but it was not until the building was totally consumed and water had been thrown on the bodies that parties succeeded in getting enough to extricate them. This was finally done by means of a wire attached to a long pole. The bodies presented a horrible appearance, being burned beyond recognition. The remains were all placed in a box about a feet wide and four feet long. Those present began to speculate on the cause of the fire and the death of all three persons in the middle of the day, and the unanimous verdict of all was that a murderer must have been committed and the building fired in order to conceal evidence of the crime.

A neighboring farmer named John Polk was amongst those who were in the house while the tragedy was going on and he remembered that while going to and returning from the Falls he had seen a stranger whose actions now seemed suspicious to him. He soon learned that a stranger answering the description he gave was at the Palace Hotel, and enquiry elicited the fact that he had been in the house the evening and seemed very much agitated. So much so that he could not write his own name on the register, but requested the proprietor to sign the name of Charles King, who had then gone to a room assigned him, where he then was. Chief of Police McGowan was sent for and the man was placed under arrest. He at first stoutly maintained that his name was Kingston, or Kingsey, but on being told of the murder and arson he admitted that his name was Charles Luckey, that he was a son of the murdered man; that he had been out to the neighborhood of his father's place, but said he did not go there as he did not wish any one to know that he was in the neighborhood. He was taken to the lock-up and McGowan started early on Sunday morning for the scene of the tragedy. The ground was carefully gone over and in a clump of trees, south of the house, tracks were found that showed some person had been on the watch at that place. Between there and the house a lot of small burr bushes were noticed and the prisoner's pants had a number of the same kind of burrs on them when he was arrested.

The generally accepted theory is that the murderer must have gone to the house and despatched the old lady first, and then lay in wait for the man. The team which Luckey drove were put in the stable and unharmed, showing that he could have had no idea of anything being wrong about the place. He must have been killed in or near the house and his body placed in the room near where his wife was lying. Then the daughter must have appeared on the scene and been attacked outside the house, as her false teeth were found about forty feet from the door, and it was likely her screams that were heard by the neighbors. When she arrived and saw her dead parents, and probably the murderer himself, she no doubt started to retreat by the way she had just come. The murderer, it is thought, pursued her and either struck her down or choked off her screams and then dragged her back to

A large quantity of apples has been purchased in this locality this fall by speculators at one dollar per barrel. This is surely a great sacrifice for good, sound winter fruit, such as Baxters, Snows, and such kinds.

Landowner fair was a regular old fashioned Donnybrook. Several sore heads resulted therefrom on the following day.

The Fourth fair passed off very quietly. No broken heads or money chests broken open at said fair.

Mr. H. Hillis of Caintown, formerly of Athens, has taken more prizes at the different fairs this fall than any other farmer in the township.

Mr. Arthur Arnold will deliver a temperance lecture on next Sabbath morning to the St. Sabina school, Caintown.

SATURDAY, Oct. 8.—A new railway station is to be erected here shortly on the site of the old one, which was struck by lightning and burned last summer.

Breese Bros. of Syracuse have returned home after enjoying a short visit with their mother.

Henry Dier has moved into the village and intends driving stage during the winter months.

The millinery display at Whaley's on Friday and Saturday of last week was the finest ever shown in the village.

A great many enterprising citizens of this village and locality are talking strongly of moving to the N. W. next spring. This shows considerable good judgment, as this locality, including our village, is thoroughly settled in all branches of business, and the prospects of it being any better.

A. Johnson of Westport is pointing and penciling the stonework of the Episcopal church. It needed repairing very much, and it will, of course, improve the looks of the old building considerably.

If the different societies of the village do not amalgamate in the near future, some of our most prominent citizens threaten emigration, probably to Tarrytown or some other large city in the U. S. Jack may be as good as his master, but he will have to do his own barking wherever he goes.

WESTPORT.

FRIDAY, Oct. 7.—The funeral services for late Mrs. A. Taggart, of the village, was conducted in the Methodist church on Wednesday by the Rev. James Pietis. The deceased was an old and respected resident. She had reached the advanced age of 77 years.

Messrs. Connelly & Wing are improving the appearance of their furniture shop by clapboarding it.

Messrs. W. H. Frederburgh and J. H. Whelan have been to Waterdown to try to make the final arrangements for starting a paper mill here in the near future. We wish them every household success. The industry would involve an outlay of about $40,000 and would furnish labor to quite a large number of men.

Another one of those quiet marriages, for which our village has become noted of late, occurred a short time ago in the marriage of Miss V. A. Tryon to Mr. C. E. McGuire. If it is not too late we wish the young couple much joy, and a happy voyage "on the sea of life."

While the "bos of the Warbler" House was going to the train on Thursday night, the horse was frightened by a dog and became unmanageable. Wheeling, the horse ran down Church street, and fell over the Methodist church where it was caught.

The partridge in this section are either very abundant, or else they are becoming very bold. Several have been shot in the woods near the village, but one was shot on Friday evening, by Harry Arnold, in front of Mrs. Kelly's on Spring street, in the heart of the village.

The funeral of Mrs. Maurice Tain, Sr., was held in the B. C. Church on Saturday.

We had a few flakes of snow on Wednesday.

Mrs. McCormack and wife, of Odenburg, are visiting their friends, the Messrs. Taggart.

W. J. Rhine, familiarly called "Willie John" is back from Uncle Sam's dominions on a visit to his native town, Westport. From appearances we would judge that a warmer climate agrees with him well.

The hop picking on the farm of James Hughes, Bathurst, was done by five Indians and twenty-seven squaws, Cornwall, and it took them two weeks to do the work. They picked 845 boxes, about 8,000 pounds.

The matron of the Mercer Reformatory for women, Toronto told the grand jurors last week that the reason there were not more inmates in the institution was because the Salvation Army was making its beneficial influence felt.

There is not and there cannot be, any smoking tobacco superior to the "Myrtle Navy brand." A wrapper of brighter appearance and higher price is possible to get, but all wrappers are very poor smoking tobacco and but a single leaf is wrapped round the plug of tobacco used in the body of the "Myrtle Navy" plug is the very best which money can purchase. The powers of the Virginia soil can produce nothing better, and no other soil in the world can produce as fine tobacco as that of Virginia.

Attention has again been called to the old trick of unscrupulous cheese exporters who have American cheese sent to England through Montreal and passed off as Canadian cheese, by a somewhat peculiar incident related by The New York Commercial Bulletin. A note reading, as follows was found enclosed in a bottle placed in a cheese bought for Canadian—"The receiver of this cheese will please do the favor and answer this, and write us home and address, what he paid for it and how it is." The epistle was signed by a factoryman of a town in Wisconsin. The Wisconsin dealer when he sold the cheese doubtless had no knowledge of the intention of the exporter to ship it by way of Montreal. This matter of mixing Canadian and American cheese for export from Montreal should receive attention.

A Monster Cheese.

An enormous cheese mould was shipped from Ottawa to Perth on Tuesday, where it will be used under the direction of Prof. Robertson, Dominion dairy commissioner, in manufacturing the monster Canadian cheese intended for the Chicago World's Fair. The mould stands seven feet high and is nine feet in diameter. In order to make the cheese, arrangements are being made for securing three days' mill of six hundred cows. The weight of the cheese when made, will be something enormous, running into the thousands of pounds. This triumph of dairy work will form a sort of experimental farm exhibit at Chicago next year.
