

AN IMPORTANT CASE.

A Pillar sent to prison for representing an imitation pill to be the same as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—A Far Reaching Decision.

MONTREAL, Jan. 24, 1898.—A case of more than ordinary interest to the public came before Judge Lafontaine here to-day, the facts being as follows: For some time past one H. E. Mignier has been going about peddling a pill which he represented as being the same as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Co. placed the matter in the hands of Detective Haynes, of the Canadian secret service, who soon had collected sufficient evidence to warrant the arrest of Mignier on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. Meantime Mignier had left Montreal, going to St. John, N. B. On his arrival in that city he was at once placed under arrest and an official escort to bring him back here. He was brought before Judge Lafontaine this morning on two charges, and pleaded guilty to both. It was pointed out that his offence was a grave one and left him liable to a lengthy term of imprisonment. The counsel for the Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Co. stated that his clients did not wish to press for severe punishment at this time; they only wished to establish the fact that representing an imitation pill to be the same as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was a crime which left the perpetrator liable to a lengthy imprisonment. On one charge the judge imposed a sentence of ten days, and in the other case a sentence of two days in jail without the option of a fine. This decision is likely to have a far-reaching effect, as it seems to establish the principle that substitutes and those who sell imitations representing them to be the same as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, are liable under the criminal code, which is in force all over the Dominion, and it will no doubt, to a considerable extent, put an end to this nefarious business, as it is evident from the fact that the Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Co. went to the expense of bringing this man back from so great a distance as St. John, that they intend sparing no expense to protect both the public and themselves in such cases.

Wanamaker on Advertising.

"I never in my life used such a thing as a poster or dodger or handbill. My plan for twenty years has been to buy as much space in a newspaper and fill it up as I wanted. I would not give an advertisement in a newspaper of 500 circulation for 5000 dodgers or posters. "If I wanted to sell cheap jewelry, or run a gambling scheme I might use posters; but I would not give a decent reading public with handbills. "The class of people who read them are too poor to look to for support in mercantile affairs. I deal directly with the publisher. I say to him: "How long will you let me run a column of matter through your paper for $100 or $500, as the case may be. I let him do the figuring and if I think he is not trying to take more than his share, I give him the copy. I say aside the profits on a particular line of goods for advertising purposes. "At first I laid aside $3000, last year I laid aside and spent $40,000. I have done better this year and shall increase that sum as the profits warrant it. I owe my success to newspapers, and to them I freely give a certain profit of my yearly business. "In late years Mr. Wanamaker's advertising has, of course, reached much more. Diamond Dyes are the Only Stone and Pure Dye-stuffs. Our legislators have enacted stringent laws for the prevention of food adulteration, and as a result our people have been benefited, and all classes of our population get value for their money. It would be a boon to the women of Canada if the adulteration act applied to package dyes sold for home dyeing. Dye-stuffs are now used in tens of thousands of homes, and too frequently valuable goods and materials are spoiled by use of adulterated dyes that should be prohibited by law. The Diamond Dyes for long years have given the most complete satisfaction. They are the only reliable, pure and fast dye now before the public—the only package dyes that can stand the most crucial chemical tests. Diamond Dyes are sold by all up-to-date druggists and dealers. If you meet a dealer who recommends some other make of dye, pause before you buy from him. Such a dealer is working only for big profits; he has no regard for your success and comfort. An Inventor's Reward. A young man employed at $1.80 a day in one of the factories in New Britain, Conn., recently invented an attachment to a machine on which he was working which promises to be of great value. Four men were employed on this machine prior to his invention and its use was about to be abandoned because of the expense attending the running of it. The young man devised an attachment which when applied to the machine permitted one boy to attend it, and he can now do as much work as the four men could previously. This machine is run regularly every day, and is doing good work at a saving of $6 a day over former cost. The president of the company gave the young man a check for $25. A good man is a useful man. He is not all ornament. He has his work to do, his place in society to fill, his duties to attend. He is fruitful. Others share in his goodness. Homes are blessed, communities improved and the church benefited. He scatters blessing all along his pathway. He is no content with the grounds. There is neither a bummer nor a divine demand for his removal as a nuisance. He is spared year after year on account of his productivity. By his prayers, his spirit and his deeds he imparts his benefits all who come within his reach.

The Temperance Question.

(The Rev. E. L. Hicks, M. A., Canon of Manchester.) Many causes are assigned for intemperance, and they are all in their measure true. But my experience leads me to regard the drink mainly as a matter of temptation. "When I don't see it, I don't want it," is what we constantly say to ourselves. But, given the temptation—then the exciting cause of intemperance are as many and varied as the moods and conditions of humanity. We might say that the lines of Coleridge, and say: "All thoughts, all passions, all delights Whatever stirs this mortal frame, All are the ministers of drink. And feed his hellish flame."

But first, what is intemperance? What ever degree of excess, however small, impairs the physical health, relaxes the self control, and makes a man the worse in body or mind—that is what you and I mean by intemperance. But intemperance, as understood in the law courts, is quite a different matter. I find no legal definition of it. I believe the police hold no one to be technically drunk as long as he can stand up. At home the drunk (husband or wife) may make the house a hell, but the law pays no regard. And in practice every one over sixteen with any amount of liquor, provided the victim be able somehow to stagger home. Let us remember that the drink crave is one of the most incurable and calamitous of diseases. It is a physical ailment, but it is also a moral ailment in one—so strong a moral ailment that it is almost impossible, through heredity, climate, and the conditions of modern life. Now we license 186,000 liquor shops virtually to propagate this disease; for the colossal gains of the traffickers depend on the success with which they spread the love of drink. It is the intemperate who (though they may never be legally drunk) are their regular customers. With an inhuman indifference to consequences, and with a sole view of profit, the tempter who is placed precisely where our brothers and sisters are most easily tempted—where they most require protection—near great works; near holiday resorts; in crowded alleys; in the heart of the town; in the heart of the city; in the heart of the business. But there are different kinds of business, and we meet here not as crimps, but as Christians. The words of a great brewer are as true to-day as when he wrote them: "The struggle of the school, the library and the Church united, against the beer-house and the gin-palace, is but one development of the war between heaven and hell."

The remedies suggested have been substantially two: 1. To keep the people from the drink. 2. To keep the drink from the people. Most of us are agreed about the first; there is more doubt as to the second; but there is more sure to go together. Prohibition without moral education would be a failure; moral education without legislation is failure.—Hand and Heart.

Rum Did It. The close relation between the use of intoxicating drinks and the prevalence of crime is one that is apparent even to a casual observer of social conditions. An analysis of the returns from our courts of justice and our prisons abundantly confirms the impression. It is a relation of cause and effect. We have become so accustomed to it that we have grown sadly insensitive. There is a crying need for the quickening of the public conscience on this matter, and for an arousal of public sentiment. Several years ago, a reporter on one of the daily papers in an Eastern city, in recording the events of the day, appended the significant words: "Rum did it" to his recital of every crime and casualty which was the result of the use of intoxicants. At first it made little impression, but as day after day, the ominous words were repeated, men received a new and very definite impression of the blighting and accursed effects of strong drink. The liquor-dealers began to wince under it and to protest against it. Presently the distinguishing words ceased to appear in the columns of the paper. The rumor was current that influential brewers and liquor-dealers brought pressure to bear upon the financial management, and succeeded in suppressing the offensive words. The truth stung them. There is nothing that the liquor traffickers were so fearful from the truth. The mere truth is its fearful condemnation. We suggest to our readers, by way of an impressive object lesson, that they make an analysis for a single week of the records of crimes published in the daily papers which enter their homes, writing the words—"Rum did it," wherever the crime may then be justly charged. This would bring to every new revelation and to all a deepened conviction of the evils of strong drink.—Baptist Union.

It is never worth while to be cross. Do you know why? For one thing, it makes you a coward. If you have trouble and are cross, it shows that you are not bold enough to meet it. If you are cross with those who love you, it proves that you do not appreciate their kindness. So it goes on; it is never worth while to be cross, no matter what happens. The largest congregation in America is that of St. Stanislaus Koskas in Chicago, which has 30,000 communicants. This number of attendants at the several Sunday services frequently exceed 15,000. There are 110 women lawyers in the United States, and eight have earned the right to practice before the Supreme Court.

Catarrh Shackles Broken in 60 Minutes.

It is an alarming fact, but statistics bear it out, that at least 10 in every hundred persons in this country are afflicted with Catarrh of the bladder. It is a disease which is often overlooked, and which, if not treated, will lead to the most serious consequences. For years I was a victim of chronic Catarrh; the first application of Dr. Ayer's Catarrh powder gave me instant relief, and in an incredibly short time I was permanently cured.—James H. Scams for Odd Moments.

Mag.—"I believe she has on a last year's hat." Clara—"Woman! She still has her last year's husband!" "Tommy," said the teacher, "what is meant by nutritious food?" "Something that ain't got no taste to it," replied Tommy.

"The men, you know, are to inherit the earth." "That's all right, but they will have to get the cheery to collect it for them."

Old Ben—"Well, have you succeeded in catching your wife yet?" Young Benedict—"Oh, yes! I am able to make her do anything she wants to."

Minards Liniment is the Best. A Boston post sent a poem to one of the papers, entitled, "Oh, let Me Die at Home!" The editor has promised to let him provide he would keep away from the editorial room.

"You are short a cent," said the conductor as he leaned forward and breathed heavily. "You are not," said Briggs, as he caught an approving waft of garlic.

"Have you read the article 'How to tell a bad egg?'" "No, I haven't; but my advice would be if you have anything important to tell a bad egg, why—break it guilty."

Miss Kate—"I like a man with a past. He is always interesting." Miss Duplicate—"I like a man with a present, and the more expensive the present, the more interest I take in it."

Minards Liniment for Rheumatism. "Dear editor," writes the inquisitive Kensington boy, "please publish in your papers to correspondence the name of the man who told me that I had lost my job by him. I want it for composition."—Ez.

Mistress (to servant)—"Did you tell those lies at the door that I was not at home?" Servant—"Yes, ma'am." Mistress—"What did they say?" Servant—"How fertile!"

Sparhawk (to Swallow, who hasn't brought down a single bird all day)—"Do you know how I feel?" Swallow—"Oh, dear, yes; I've often shot at his house. Sportsman—Ever hit it?"

In Sweden if you address the poorest person on the street you must first kiss his hand. The same courtesy is insisted upon if you pass a lady on the staircase. To enter a reading-room as a book with one's hat on is regarded as impertinent.

Minards Liniment Cures La Grippe. Tourist—"So that's the oldest inhabitant? One hundred and four years old. No wonder you are proud of him." Native—"I dunno; he ain't done nothing in his here place 'cept grow old, and it's took him a sight of time to do that."

"Doctor, what do you regard as the sweet hereditary trait—that is, what peculiarity is most likely to be inherited?" "My observations lead me to believe that the desire to escape work is about the most common trait that people inherit."

William H. Kroger, of San Francisco, threatened the clergyman who married his daughter by being asked to pay what he thought was too large a fee. Mrs. Kroger then refused to live with her husband, evidently being in fear of Kroger's style of argument.

A Georgia pastor, who resigned because he couldn't collect his salary, said in his farewell sermon: "I have little else to say, dear brethren, save this: 'You must be in favor of free salvation, and the manner in which you have treated me is proof that you got it.'"

"I hope you do," was the unexpected answer; "but if you don't see my young man, put on specs; 'tis a wonderful help to poor eyesight."

Belle—"Don't you think it was foolish of Madge to marry young Tomble? He's not yet through college." Stella—"How silly you are! Don't you know that he has his life insured for ten thousand dollars, and is playing centre rush on the football team."

A traveller meeting a settled man at a house in the back woods, the following colloquy occurred: "Where house?" "None." "What's it built of?" "Logs." "Any neighbors?" "None." "What's the soil?" "Dogs." "The climate?" "None." "What do you eat?" "Dogs." "How do you catch them?" "Dogs."
