Remedial Legislation.
In our last issue we published the statement presented to Parliament, by the Federal Government regarding the course to be pursued by it on the question of remedial legislation for the minority in Manitoba, and our parliament...

As is always the case when any very important question comes before the public, all kinds of opinions are expressed, by all kinds of persons, regarding remedial legislation, the duty of the Dominion Government and Parliament, Provincial rights, etc.

As will be seen by our Parliamentary report, the three French Ministers, representing the Province of Quebec, Sir Adolphe Caron, Hon. Messrs Oulmet and Angers, seemed at first to be unable to agree to all the details of the plan adopted by their colleagues in the Cabinet, and one of them Hon. Mr. Angers, has withdrawn from the Government.

disinterested motives. Mr. Angers is a man of strong convictions, and sterling integrity, against whose public or private character no one can have anything to say. We must all admit that those ministers, coming, as they do, from a Province where toleration and justice to minorities find their highest realization would naturally have strong feelings and strong convictions on a question of this kind; consequently, we should be slow to impute to them any but the highest and purest of motives.

The course pursued by the opposition on this question cannot be regarded as anything short of contemptible. Having enunciated no policy on the matter, the leader of the opposition leaves nothing undone to embarrass the Government, in consequence of the declaration they have made. The question of remedial legislation should be above party, and should be treated from the point of view of justice and equity. We are strongly of opinion that in the way it would be treated in the Imperial Parliament. The Opposition would join with the Government in bringing about such legislation as would seem to meet the requirements of the case. That would be a statesmanlike course to pursue; but Mr. Laurier pursues a course altogether different, a course peculiar to himself and to the party which he leads. Without having the courage to express his own convictions without daring to show his hand, he introduces a motion calculated to embarrass the Government for enacting the course they think best to be pursued in the settlement of this much vexed question. And what is the motion? Would it be believed, nothing more or less than a motion to adjourn. Supporting, for argument sake, that one of these motions should carry and the Government were to resign in consequence, would Mr. Laurier appeal to the cleavage of the Dominion on the policy of adjournment? A rather vague policy, it must be confessed.

In this connection, we can scarcely refrain from referring to some remarks of the Examiner, on the question under review. In its issue of the 9th inst., containing the first telegraphic account of the Government's decision, and before any explanation had been made to Parliament regarding the reported resignation of the French Ministers above referred to, our contemporary feigned "a crisis in the Government of Canada," and threw all the blame on the French ministers. Indeed the "impetuosity" manifested by our contemporary, to use its own expression, would almost induce one to believe that it rejoiced at the opportunity of having a fling at the French Ministers. In the course of its article it says: "The Government of Manitoba together with influential representatives of Manitoba not in the Government, have publicly expressed a desire to remedy the grievance which has been admitted and asked for a fuller investigation into the facts." We must say that we have watched this matter pretty carefully since the last decision of the Imperial Privy Council was published, and we are free to confess that we have not seen the declaration wherein the "Manitoba Government publicly expressed a desire to remedy the grievance." As to the facts, no one knows them better than the members of the Manitoba Government, and if they desire to remedy the grievance of which they are the authors, we feel sure no member of the Federal Government will place any obstacles in their way. We sincerely hope that the Manitoba Government may yet make some advances towards righting the wrong they have perpetrated; but very far they have not given any very strong evidence of such a desire. Another somewhat extraordinary remark of the EXAMINER, in the article in question is that "the French members will at all events, learn they cannot successfully dictate to the Government and people of the whole Dominion." What evidence has the EXAMINER that the French members have any such desire? The strongest refutation of the assumption of our contemporary, that the "French members" are actuated by any such motive is found in the genuine toleration, the justice and "equal rights" enjoyed by the minority in the Province of Quebec. In view of such facts as these, we cannot help believing that the EXAMINER was carried away by its "impetuosity."

Dominion Parliament.

When the orders of the day were called in the House of Commons, on Tuesday the 9th, Mr. Laurier rose and said: "I now renew the question which I put last evening to my hon. friend with regard to the resignation of certain members of the administration." Hon. Mr. Foster—Mr. Speaker—all that I can say to my hon. friend and to the house is that I have not any authority from His Excellency, the Governor-General, to make a statement other than that, that no resignations have as yet been received by him. This statement did not satisfy Mr. Laurier and he made a speech of some length, attacking the Government, winding up by moving the adjournment of the House.

Mr. Foster was received with loud cheers by supporters of the government. He said: "The hon. gentleman who had just taken his seat, if he did not start with this, closely followed his opening remarks with the statement that today witnessed a proceeding unprecedented, or at least things unprecedented in the history of the government of this country. I am quite willing to admit with him that this phrase was well chosen, although I would apply it in a different way from the application which he evidently meant it should be made. I say it is a thing unprecedented in the parliamentary history of this country that an hon. gentleman leading her majesty's opposition should, on the strength of mere rumor, (despite the laughter from opposition benches) newspaper or common rumor, should come to the conclusion that in the first place any part of this country, any one of its provinces, was unrepresented in the government, and that even if it were unrepresented, that so long as there was a government that held the confidence of the house and had its majority that therefore it could not carry on the affairs of the government. Sir, my hon. friend, as I stated, has nothing better than rumor on which to go. He asked me for authentic information. He received the whole modicum of authentic information that I could give, and he should have rested satisfied with that. He should have restrained his ardent impetuosity to force the position. He could have waited in a statesmanlike and calm manner (opposition laughter) until we learn the truth from authoritative sources in a full and explicit statement of the house, and then have taken whatever action seemed to him in the premises. But, Sir, he chose another position and in doing that he made a brave charge and followed that up by a serious motion. On mere rumor he has put himself in the position of taking a stand which is certainly unprecedented in the parliamentary history of Canada. Sir, he leaped to a conclusion from a newspaper rumor that because there were vacant seats in the ministerial benches, that therefore the members who formerly were in those seats, and whom he would like to see there now, were no longer members of the government; no longer in union or harmony with the government. And he leaped from that conclusion to a still broader conclusion, that one of the provinces of the Dominion was totally unrepresented and that therefore the house could not proceed with its business. He was wrong in both. He was wrong in the slightest foundation in authority for taking the position he did, and he could only have taken that position upon an authoritative statement made by consent of his excellency the governor general to this house. He is curiously inaccurate in the line of the remedial order and the terms of the judgment of the privy council of the 29th January, 1895, preclude or postpone the introduction of the remedial legislation announced in your statement of Monday last? Hon. Mr. Foster—My answer simply is, that no. Mr. Laurier—I will say every thing I can say in the atmosphere of the cabinet. (Cheers and laughter.) Perhaps the hon. gentleman will be able to give us information as to the non-existing crisis which was supposed to exist. Mr. Foster—I am glad that my hon. friend shows such skill in reading political weather predictions, if it may so describe them. I have but very few remarks to make in reply to the questions which have been put by my hon. friend on previous occasions and repeated today. Some differences arose between members of the cabinet with reference to the question of remedial legislation. The statement which I made the other day to the house gave the position of the government on that matter. The difference in the cabinet arose chiefly on two lines. Some of our colleagues were of the opinion that it was useless and consequently unnecessary to prolong negotiations with the Manitoba government with a view to a settlement of the question by that government themselves. The other question of difference arose consequently from that. They believe that remedial legislation should be introduced at once, starting from the premise that there was nothing to be hoped for from the action of the Manitoba government and legislature itself. I need not reiterate the position of the government. It was shown in the statement I made the other day in this house. Both those positions were taken in that statement. The one that we would grant to Manitoba a certain amount of time in the hope that negotiations would be entered into and an amicable settlement of this question arrived at. The other was that in so intricate and important a question the greatest deliberation was necessary in the perfecting of legislation in the matter and that no all this session should be introduced. Those differences of opinion were canvassed by the different members of the government. I regret to say that one of our colleagues who has not a seat in this house finds it impossible to accede to the view of the majority of the government, while still holding very high and strongly to his view that remedial legislation should be undertaken and pressed to a conclusion since yesterday. This is the second sitting and the leader of the opposition says that under these circumstances the government have no right to proceed with the business of the house because the province of Quebec, so far as those two seats are concerned, is not represented. Well, sir, I do not think there is a man of this house who would more than I ask that my province should be represented in the government. I hope that province is now represented in the government and if it is not now represented I have no doubt that the leader of the house and the first minister will see that it should be represented immediately. (Some members, hear, hear.) I do not know what the hon. gentleman would wish if the word "immediately" is not sufficient for them. For my part, I am not disposed on a motion to adjourn the house to vote non-confidence in the government which I have supported from the beginning of the session. If the leader of the house comes down with a statement about those vacant seats and gives a reason why they are vacant which is not acceptable, I am not the man to say yes to the government under such circumstances. If a vote of non-confidence is then required, of course I shall give it, but now I shall certainly not support a motion made by the hon. leader of the opposition. (Conservative cheers.) Mr. Dupont, speaking in French, re-echoed Sir Hector Langevin's statements. The house then divided. Mr. Laurier's motion to adjourn was negatived by 111 to 72. Mr. Laurier, in a sorry to say, in a very short speech, Conservative who voted against the government.

In the Senate, on Wednesday at the opening of the sitting, Senator Scott said: "Before the orders of the day are called, I should like to ask the premier if he is able to relieve the tension of opinion on an important question, the rumors outside, which are somewhat confirmed by an empty chair. I think parliament is entitled to some explanation under the circumstances. It is the usual practice in the British parliament, and other parliaments when a crisis arises that both houses are taken into the confidence of the government. Sir Mackenzie Bowell—The hon. gentleman is quite correct as to the parliamentary and constitutional practice on a question of that kind. I am not, however, in a position to relieve the tension of the hon. gentleman's mind at the present moment, but I promise him that there is no doubt I shall be enabled to relieve him of all anxiety as to the matter to-morrow at three o'clock. In the commons Mr. Laurier said: "I would now ask the minister of finance whether he can give any information to the house to-day with regard to the resignations of three members of the administration. Mr. Foster—Mr. Speaker, I think I will have to ask my hon. friend to cultivate the virtues of patience for a little while longer. Tomorrow when the house assembles I shall make a positive statement in reference to the matter. Mr. Laurier—My hon. friend has asked me so often to cultivate that virtue that I think I have it to perfection now. (Laughter.) As an evidence of it I will wait until to-morrow. (Renewed laughter.)

GENTLEMEN—Feeling it my duty to give you an uncolored testimony for the direct benefit I have received in my family from the use of Dr. Fowler's Strawberry Extract of Wild Strawberry, let me say that while we resided at Fenwick, Ont., my little son had an attack of dysentery or blood flux, by which he was reduced to a mere shadow and became quite helpless. Fortunately my family physician advised the use of Dr. Fowler's Strawberry Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I immediately procured. We have always had Extract of Strawberry in the house since to be ready for emergencies common to children in summer from the effects of fruits, etc. I would just as soon think of being my right eye as being deprived of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. This is a testimony of thanks for the untold benefit myself and family have received from this great remedy.
